Roseth takes sting out of anti-music ordinance; restaurants still silent

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE MIXING of alcohol and live music will once again be permissible in Carmel.

The longstanding anti-honky tonk law that managed to unplug the Carmel Rotary Blues Band at a Bach Festival party in July will no longer be a threat to such special events.

Last week, Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth issued a determination that interprets the ordinance to apply only to businesses that serve alcohol.

Planning staff "took a hard look" at the 1939 ordinance, which, to some, is comically out-of-date and, to blues band members, amounts to a true obstacle.

Roseth tried to reconstruct the intent behind it, and determined that "infrequent, single-day events" should be exempt from the ban on simultaneous music and drink.

The original purpose of the ordinance was to regulate "liquor establishments," not community events, according to Roseth.

However, special events mixing the two activities must be limited to less than four times a year. A one-day liquor permit will still be required, Roseth said.

Underscoring the bad luck of the blues band, the city has not always enforced the ordinance over the years. It

Huge lion shot at C.V. resort

■ 'I've got to protect my members and their kids.'

— MIKE DORMODY

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE THRILL of seeing a magnificent mountain lion in the woods takes on a white-knuckled quality when the beast walks by a 2-year-old's playhouse in broad daylight, after apparently eating a family dog just up the road.

That was the situation Mike Dormody described to The Pine Cone Wednesday, and why he ended up shooting the lion out of a tree on his San Clemente Rancho Sept. 3.

Biologist Terry Palmisano struggles to weigh the impressive male cougar shot on the San Clemente Rancho Sept. 3. At 140 pounds, he was the biggest lion Palmisano had ever seen.

PARK DISTRICT SEEKS TO KILL HATTON CANYON FREEWAY BY CUTTING OFF BOTH ENDS

■ Carmel council agrees to join in rezoning effort

By PAUL MILLER

IN A legal maneuver remarkable for its inventiveness, the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District Board of Directors voted Monday night to ask the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to rezone Hatton Canyon as a park. Tuesday the Carmel City Council agreed to join in the rezoning application.

If the Board of Supervisors turns back the request — which it is almost certain to do — District Manager Gary Tate says the Park Board will take its proposal directly to the California Coastal Commission.

"Five years ago I would have told you there's no way the commission would agree to such a request," Lee Otter of the coastal commission staff told The Pine Cone. But in 1996 the Monterey Park Board succeeded in amending Sand City's zoning laws against the wishes of the town's city council. "It's the only time that has been done in the state of California," Otter said.

The strategy arises because Hatton Canyon is located in the unincorporated area of Monterey County — outside the Carmel City Council's jurisdiction.

Similarly, the Park Board has no authority over whether or not a freeway will be built in Hatton Canyon. The Monterey County Board of Supervisors — and its pro-parkway majority — has the power to decide what happens in the canyon.

But two tiny pieces of the route the proposed highway would follow also lie inside the Carmel area coastal zone and are subject to the Coastal Commission's jurisdiction.

Supervisor Dave Potter — probably the sole voice on the board against the proposed highway — is also a coastal commissioner. Tate says

CITY PROMISES $100,000 TO HELP PAY FOR AMBULANCE

By PAUL WOLF

HOPING TO sweeten the pot, the Carmel City Council has agreed to chip in $100,000 a year if local voters agree to the proposed ambulance parcel tax (Measure B) in November.

Passed unanimously Tuesday, the council's action would reduce ambulance costs for each household in the city. Earlier the council said that each single-family residences would pay no more than $75 a year under Measure B. The amount may be far lower now, according to city

Pebble Beach's singing lawyer wows 3Com Park fans

By JERRY STEWART

AT 3COM Park, current home of the San Francisco Giants, Donald Loftus is known as "The Singing Lawyer From Pebble Beach."

Last Thursday, with the Stars and Stripes blowing gently in the Candlestick Point breeze, the local attorney welcomed over 8,000 fans to a game between the Giants and Houston Astros by delivering a rousing rendition of our national anthem.

Afterwards, fans complimented the 53-year-old on his performance with pats on the back and shouts of 'Great job!' and 'You have the voice!'.

One fan even asked him to autograph a baseball, which Loftus graciously did with a smile.

"It's great to see the response," said Loftus, who lives in Pebble Beach but practices in Monterey. "As I'm performing the song I can hear the fans' spontaneous eruptions."

Don Loftus

For Loftus, being on stage is not a new experience, as his portfolio includes an appearance on TV's General Hospital and the lead role in the Downey Civic Light Opera's version of "Damn Yankees."

"I don't get nervous out there," said Loftus, who entered a state of quiet meditation just prior to heading out to the mound.

To achieve the honor, Loftus said he simply picked up the phone and called the Giants' executive offices.

"I just called the Giants and asked them if I could sing the anthem," Loftus said. "After I sent them a resume and tape, they called back and invited me to come up. I sang the anthem back in April for a game against the Mets and they must have liked it because they invited me back."

After Thursday's performance, Loftus said he was thinking about the possibility of singing the anthem for a postseason game in October.

"Hopefully they'll make the playoffs and I'll be invited back," said Loftus.

If that scenario occurs, the game would be televised nationally, which means Loftus' audience would stretch from coast to coast.

According to Loftus, the two experiences have made him more of a baseball fan.

"When I did the game back in April the Giants won and went on a winning streak," he said. "It would be nice to be able to take credit for that."

Unfortunately for Loftus and the Giants, the results were different a second time around, as the Giants lost 14-2 to precariously remain in the chase.

But the season is not over yet, and with a little help from his friends on the diamond the "Singing Lawyer from Pebble Beach" may indeed make a cameo appearance at 3Com in the future.

he has discussed with Potter the possibility of the state board using its power over the two small pieces of land to put a halt to the whole parkway.

One of the pieces is a triangular patch of land which lies between the Barnyard and Crossroads shopping complexes and Highway 1. The other piece is adjacent to the Carpenter street intersection with Highway 1.

If the Park District succeeds in getting those two small pieces designated by the Coastal Commission solely for park land, Caltrans would theoretically be able to build in Hatton Canyon itself, but would have a freeway that doesn't go anywhere.

"This is a desperate, ninth-inning effort to stop the parkway by people who just don't know when to quit," one parkway advocate said. "The environmental benefits of building the new highway are tremendous, especially because it will eliminate the polluting masses of idling automobiles, and because it will get all that traffic out of Carmel," the advocate said.

'Five years ago I would have told you there is no way the Commission would agree to such a request.'

– Lee Otter,
Coastal Commission staff

Lois Starnes, founder of Citizens for Hatton Canyon, agreed. "It's past time to get it built," she said.

Freeway opponents decry what they say will be the environmental ruination of Hatton Canyon, and say improving Highway 1 is the better solution.

"We'll also be asking the supervisors to immediately carry out additional improvements to the existing Highway 1 - Carmel Valley Road interchange," Tate said, "including two right turn lanes onto Highway 1 and two lanes heading uphill toward Ocean Ave."

officials.

Because the measure requires a daunting two-thirds majority, the council was urged to show some good faith, and become a "partner" with residents to pay for a full-time, in-town ambulance.

"We need every edge you can give us" (to get this measure approved), Carmelite Clayton Anderson, a Measure B supporter, told the council.

Strictly speaking, city officials cannot campaign for or against the measure.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar recommended that the council contribute $100,000 each year — an amount roughly equal to the city's current subsidy of the ambulance.

The CRFA is a joint powers agency that includes Carmel and Carmel Valley territory. It has served as an alternative to the county's American Medical Responder, which cannot promise the same quick response times as CRFA or a full-time ambulance within the city limits.

Expecting a dramatic rise in the cost of subsidizing the CRFA, Kersnar and a local ambulance task force developed the ballot proposal that became Measure B. In short order, there was pressure from residents — including supporters of the measure — to secure the city's financial partnership.

Pat Sippel, who served on the ambulance task force and now chairs the "Yes on B" committee, said some kind of good faith gesture from the city is needed if the measure is to have a chance of passing.

Only Carmel voters can participate in the election, but the property assessment would apply to all property owners — residential and commercial. Assessment amounts would depend on the type of property, ranging from vacant lot (smallest assessment) to large motels and hotels (largest assessment).

"I don't think $100,000 out of our general funds is excessive," said councilman Bob Fischer.

Business owner charging city 'harassment' demands investigation, apology

By PAUL WOLF

A CARMEL business owner who has accused the city of a "campaign of malicious harassment" is demanding an independent investigation of alleged city misconduct.

David Muston, owner of Carmel Camera Center at San Carlos and Sixth, said an independent probe is needed because he has singled out five people within the city staff, including City Administrator Jere Kersnar, as participants in the alleged harassment.

"You need someone outside the city organization, or else it is like having John Mitchell investigate Watergate," Muston told the city council at a meeting Tuesday.

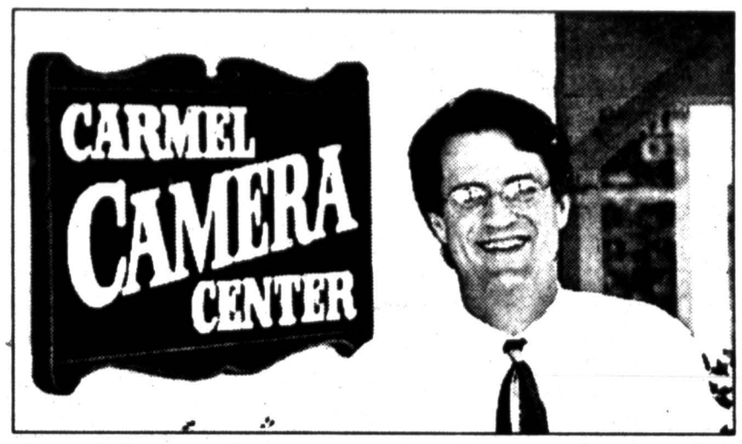
Muston charges the city of "deliberately trying to shut my business down" after finding a list of 15 code violations that proved, in virtually every instance, not to have merit.

"The city absolutely has made no personal attack on Mr. Muston and made no attempt to harm him in any way," said Bill Hill, Carmel fire chief and the city's code officer during the nine-month period in question.

Although not commenting on the substance of Muston's charges, Hill said "errors were made by the city but corrected very quickly."

Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio told The Pine Cone Wednesday that Kersnar will review the sequence of events and report to the council about his findings at a future council meeting.

Muston told the newspaper that he wants the city to hire an independent attorney who would return with recommended disciplinary action against some or all of five people named: Kersnar; City Attorney Don Freeman; Building Official Tim Meroney; Planning Director Brian Roseth, and Assistant Fire Chief John Willett.



Carmel Camera Center owner David Muston demands that the city take disciplinary action for an extended campaign of harassment against him.

'You need someone outside the city organization, or else it is like having John Mitchell investigate Watergate.'

— David Muston

Say they're sorry

Muston also said he wants an official apology from the city. "If you good people are willing to conduct a thorough investigation and take all disciplinary action required, fine. The matter ends here."

City Attorney Don Freeman told the newspaper that the city "has bent over backwards" to come to peaceable terms with Muston.

The proprietor said he suffered humiliation when, one day out of the blue, Meroney, Willet and a uniformed police officer cited him with a list of "numerous life/safety violations" that city officials said they found in his building.

A key "violation" (later thrown out) was the city's claim that Muston was storing flammable liquids in the basement and endangering residents upstairs. Muston pointed out that there was nothing above him except sky – no apartment at all, but that didn't stop the investigation until much later. In the end, the city dropped all its charges against Muston.

D'Ambrosio, while noting conflicts with business people are common, said he cannot recall a business owner asserting such sweeping charges of mistreatment.

If Muston doesn't get his independent investigation and apology, he said he will "file a case of official misconduct" with the Monterey County Grand Jury.

At present, Muston says he is not seeking compensation for the $30,000 he has spent fighting the city with attorneys, engineers and inspectors.

was only before the recent Bach Festival Party that a resident complained, prodding the city to enforce the 58-year-old law.

Pine Cone articles from December 1939 show the overwhelming concern of city leaders directed at piano bars. "Carmel doesn't want pianos in taprooms any more than it wants neon signs in its streets," said Everett Smith, mayor from 1936-38.

At the time, Carmel City Attorney William Luis Hudson offered to "draw up an ordinance prohibiting any entertainment in taprooms — except drinking."

Carmel Rotary Blues band members Barry Harrow, Chris McKay, Thelma Howard and Greg Kraft sing the blues at Carmel's birthday celebration last October.

Without a hitch

Many nonprofit groups in town are breathing a collective sigh of relief. The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club's fund raiser for Piccadilly Park went off last weekend without a hitch. That event, held at La Playa, included wine and a jazz duo.

Police Lt. Bill Uretsky said that the police received no complaints about the garden club's fund raiser or a Sunset Center for the Arts event two weeks ago.

Police Chief Don Fuselier is happy no longer to have to be the bad guy enforcing an archaic ordinance.

"I applaud the planning department for coming up with a definition that makes it easier for all of us to understand the ordinance," he said.

Restaurateurs ask: Why not us?

Perhaps not everyone in town is clicking their heels. Some restaurateurs are wondering why they can't offer musical performances to their customers.

"If I enjoy a live performance, it shouldn't be hinged to monetary issue of profit or nonprofit," said Csaba Ajan, managing partner of Portabella Restaurant and Cafe Americana.

Although Ajan thinks that allowing nonprofit events is a step in the right direction, he hopes the city will change its mind about music in restaurants.

"We live in a community known for artistic and creative people," Ajan said. "There should be a loosening of a very archaic rule."

Chris McKay, lead singer of the Carmel Rotary Blues Band, is satisfied. "It's all we were asking for: A chance to raise funds for music programs."

The blues band will be performing at the Carmel Business Association's "A taste of Carmel" Oct. 3.

"We're thrilled," said Diana Tiernan, manager of Carmel Plaza, who got the news earlier this week. "For the things we do here, it (live music and alcohol) is totally right and appropriate."

Misson Ranch sued by drummer injured on collapsed stairs

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

MISSION RANCH, one local place fortunate enough to provide live music with alcohol sales, is facing a lawsuit connected with that privilege.

Drummer Andrew Weis is suing the Ranch after he fell down while walking down a set of stairs, which collapsed, according to the lawsuit. Weis broke his left hand in the fall.

Weis was setting up his drum set on the edge of a stage. He was about to perform with the Scott and Peggy Brown Band.

Weis said nobody warned him about the defective condition about the stairs.

Mission Ranch declinedto comment on the lawsuit.

MOUNTAIN LION

Rancho San Carlos, and 100 acres of that was developed decades ago as a rustic family resort with 100 cabins, a fishing lake, tennis courts and swimming pools.

Four nights before the lion shooting, Bruce Dormody was awakened by one of the guests who heard a dog yelp and the sound of something being dragged into the brush. The next day, they found tufts of dog hair but no other sign of their Australian shepherd.

'The treed lion looks down at those little hounds as if to say, 'I just ate a dog about your size, what am I doing up here?'

– Don Green, lion hunter

They were upset because the dog wasn't more than 30 feet from Erik Dormody's house when it was attacked, and because their old family pet had survived a lion attack just last spring. (Its vocal chords were ripped, but a heavy leather collar apparently saved its life that time.)

When Peggy Crawford, the gatekeeper of the resort, saw a big yellow cougar walking down the middle of the road next to her 2-year-old granddaughter's playhouse Wednesday morning, Mike Dormody decided it was time to call a lion hunter. "I wanted to get revenge for that poor old dog and rid this menace from my resort," he said.

Easy tracking for lion dogs

A lion hunter named Don Green came from Chualar Canyon with his hounds to track down the big cat. It's no problem for them to follow the scent, because they smell to high heaven, according to Dormody. "I got musk from the big male on my hands; it took four days to get it off. It has a horrible smell."

Green's hounds picked up the trail immediately, but two took off to the east, and another started running and baying at a hot trail to the west. They could see a big yellow cougar with a very long tail heading toward a PG&E tree-trimming crew, with two dogs chasing. Dormody followed the other dog across a creek and up the side of a very steep, poison oak-covered hill.

"I spent half an hour climbing this stupid mountain," said Dormody. "I've had a hip replacement and I'm not so young anymore. I'll tell you I was panting when I got to the tree where the lion was hiding."

Dormody, who used to hunt years ago when his resort was often used by hunters and fishermen, said he hasn't shot a gun in 30 years. He had to catch his breath and calm down before he aimed and fired.

To his surprise, the cougar he killed wasn't yellow at all; it was dark gray.

"Biggest lion I've seen"

Terry Palmisano, biologist for California Fish & Game, gave the permit over the phone when the Dormodys called. If domestic animals are attacked by a lion, permits to kill the cats are routinely given. She came to San Clemente Rancho to examine the dead lion, and to determine if it truly did eat the family dog.

The 140-pound male lion ate a dog about the size of the hound that later treed him at San Clemente Rancho.

"It was the biggest lion I've ever seen, a male at least 140 pounds," Palmisano told The Pine Cone. His teeth were worn down some (indicating he was about 10 years old) and he was in very good shape with plenty of fat on him. She did a necropsy on site because the lion was too big to take back to her office. When she cut open the cougar's belly, she found long white hairs that appeared to be from the Australian shepherd.

"We can't be sure, but I believe it was the right lion," said Palmisano.

The Dormodys were still concerned, because there were obviously two lions near the resort. Mike believes the one that got away was the mate of the big dead male. Palmisano refused his request to go after the female right away. If she comes back and threatens people or animals at the resort, he will have to apply for a permit at that time, he said.

Green said it's not unusual for a male and female lion to travel together for some time, killing together. "Once they get a taste of easy pickings like dogs and house cats, they'll likely come back."

"I asked Fish & Game, 'Why don't you just shoot them with a tranquilizer, put them in a cage and move them someplace else?'" said Dormody. "But they told me nobody wants them; there are just too many."

Palmisano granted a permit to kill another lion that same day, at another ranch in Carmel Valley. But she doesn't agree that the lions are getting out of hand. "We have a good healthy population out there — no question about that," she said. But the number of mountain lion sightings, and reports of domestic animals being killed by lions, is actually down this year from 1996. The number of lions legally shot with permits in Monterey County was four in 1995, two in 1996 and three so far this year.

Make room for lions

Seven years ago, the state legislature passed Proposition 117, the Wildlife Protection Act, which banned trophy hunting of California mountain lions and gives $30 million in tax dollars per year for 30 years to preserve habitat. Three million was used to expand the 3,500-acre Garland Park and $4 million to buy land east of Pt. Lobos, according to Gary Tate of the Monterey Regional Park District.

He explained that the lions are protected from sport hunting, but they are neither threatened nor endangered.

Lynn Sadler of the Mountain Lion Foundation is fighting to make more room for cougars in California. She sympathizes with the fears of people who live in the country and want to protect their children from attack. "But I have a real problem with people who want to experience that good country life, but with none of the inconveniences of wild animals," she said.

Sadler advises people to bring their pets inside at night, discourage deer (the lions' favorite food) from coming near their house, and never leave sweet grease on their open barbecues. "We've manipulated the lion habitat to the extent that we must change our behavior, rather than forcing the wildlife to get out of our way."

SB 329 passes

Pig-hunting bill moves to governor

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THERE WILL be fewer ham dinners for the mountain lions roaming in the hills of Carmel Valley, if Gov. Pete Wilson signs a new pig-hunting bill passed Sept. 5 by the California legislature.

The bill allows landowners to more easily kill wild pigs found damaging or destroying their property. In the past, a "take" of a feral pig required a permit from state game wardens, and hunting licenses only allowed a limited number of wild pigs to be shot.

Senator Bruce McPherson (R-Santa Cruz) shepherded the bill through the state Senate, saying the "growing feral pig population and the damage they cause made the legislation a necessity."

Botanist Vern Yadon described the damage done by wild pigs in Carmel Valley: "They get into a spring and make a big dirty mess out of it. They root out the native lilies and completely turn the soil upside down under the oaks looking for acorns."

Yadon says he's seen herds of up to 30 pigs rooting around Rancho San Carlos, eliminating food supplies for native animals like deer.

McPherson's bill was supported by The Nature Conservancy, as well as farmers, cattlemen and hunters.

Commission blocks water transfer from Spinning Wheel to three restaurants

By TAMARA GRIPPI

LARGELY BECAUSE of a new ordinance that freezes restaurant growth, the Carmel Planning Commission turned down three applications to transfer water from a closed restaurant to three thriving businesses.

The water credits that appeared to be available from the Spinning Wheel Restaurant on Monte Verde south of Ocean Avenue could have added up to 58 new seats at Carmel Beach Cafe, Little Napoli and Caffe Napoli.

Although the commission, meeting Wednesday, cited different reasons for each denial, the crucial moment of the meeting came when Carmel Senior Planner Rick Tooker showed the commission part of a recently approved food ordinance, which apparently shuts the door to such transfers.

The key part of the ordinance, which went into effect April 1, forbids a restaurant from expanding if the property in question never housed a larger restaurant.

With Carmel virtually empty in both its residential and commercial water banks, the transfer of credits is quickly becoming the most practical means of securing new water.

The commission was considering the proposal to expand Little Napoli on Dolores into an adjoining space

■ Monterey County Symphony reaches an agreement with musicians

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MONTEREY County Symphony Sunday performed its first concert after finalizing the new agreement between the symphony association and the musicians' union.

After three months of negotiations, the two groups settled on a three-year "master agreement," providing wage increases totaling $59,494. The largest stumbling block during negotiations had to do with payments into the musicians' pension fund.

The symphony will commit any bequests it receives in the next two years to a special interest-earning fund to pay into the pensions.

The musicians agreed to lower their wage demands in the second and third years of the contract if the symphony association agreed to the concessions regarding pensions.

The performance took place at Quail Meadows.

Why is Knight-Ridder Stepping All Over the Monterey Herald?

When the Knight-Ridder corporation stepped in and took over the Monterey Herald, no one expected that they would turn around and walk all over Herald employees.

But they did. First, they ripped up everyone's contract and threatened jobs and benefits. Then they brought in an outside security force to intimidate employees. They tore down the bulletin boards and restricted free speech rights – at a newspaper, no less. Knight-Ridder even got rid of award-winning reporters and columnists who have written at the Herald for years.

Well, we've got news for outside companies like Knight-Ridder who put corporate profits ahead of our community. Here in Monterey, we expect companies to treat people with respect.

That's why city leaders and Herald readers are asking Knight-Ridder to stop its attacks on our newspaper and its employees – and start negotiating fairly and responsibly.

A message from your friends and neighbors at the Monterey Herald, members of the Newspaper Guild, Communications Workers of America and GCIU.

Pebble Beach Co., union workers settle contract dispute

By KIRSTIE WILDE

AFTER SEVEN months of negotiating, the Pebble Beach Co. and its union workers met in the middle and settled their contract dispute this week. The company originally offered a 2 percent annual raise and the union asked for double that; they settled on 3 percent. All of the kitchen and engineering workers will get 7 percent raises the first year.

'The workers are thrilled about the contract.'

— Leonard O'Neill, union negotiator

The contract will run for five years, with the 350 Hotel and Restaurant Employee union workers getting 13 to 20 percent higher wages over the life of the deal, according to Mark Stilwell, vice president of the Pebble Beach Co.

"I'm very optimistic that it's going to be ratified when we vote next Wednesday," said Leonard O'Neill, secretary-treasurer of the hotel, restaurant and culinary workers union. "The workers are thrilled about the contract." (Back on August 4, those voting on the company's previous proposal turned it down by 97 percent.)

The company sweetened its offer on the issue of flexibility in scheduling and overtime payments, by offering the union another 3 percent raise if they will work occasional "back-to-back" or fixed work weeks. Employees would put in no more than 40 hours in any five day period, according to Stilwell, and it would put them in line with the way 1,200 non-union Pebble Beach workers are scheduled.

The union will vote on the tentative agreement next Wednesday.

PLANNING COMMISSION

and to increase the seating from 28 seats to 48 when Tooker brought the food ordinance to their attention.

The commission voted 5-1 to deny the request. Commissioner Pope Coleman, the only dissenter, suggested that the commission postpone its decision because the applicants were unaware of the ordinance.

Graeme Roberson, general manager of Little Napoli, agreed. "Had we known of this issue early on, it would have changed our decision-making process," Robertson said.

Restaurant cap

In addition to the Little Napoli denial, the commission voted against water transfers that would have made 20 new seats available in Carmel Beach Cafe and 18 new seats available in Caffe Napoli, both on Ocean Avenue.

The commission voted against the Carmel Beach Cafe transfer before it was aware of the ordinance. In that case, commissioners were concerned about crossing the limit of 15 restaurants on Ocean Avenue, set up by Measure H, a commercial rezoning referendum approved by local voters in 1993.

"The number of seats in question (20) would equal a small restaurant," Commissioner Sue McCloud said.

Several commissioners pointed to the prominently displayed "preamble" written not long after the city's incorporation, which declares the town to be primarily and essentially a residential community.

"I see restaurants as predominantly visitor-serving," said commission Chairwoman Yoko Whitaker.

The commission also chose to deny the last applicant, Caffe Napoli, on Ocean Avenue, for the same reasons — not wanting to increase food service because of the cap.

Constance Dudley, the commercial property owner at Caffe Napoli, argued that because Carmel lost the Spinning Wheel Restaurant, new restaurant space really wouldn't be new.

"When we talk about maintaining balance and we lose 1,800 square-feet of restaurant area, we ask that it be moved," Dudley said.

McCloud pointed out that Il Fornio in the Pine Inn and other restaurants have opened since the Spinning Wheel closed and suggested that maybe the city needs to study the status of openings and

The best car I ever owned...

Ford Deluxe 4 was 14-year-old's dream

By CARL OLIVER

THE '91 BMW M-5 was the fastest, the Chevy-powered '33 Ford was the quickest, the '84 MB turbo diesel was the most efficient and the '56 Buick convertible was the most beautiful. But the best was a 1939 Ford Deluxe 4-door sedan.

In 1949 it was our family car — my father had purchased it new in '39. He was still driving it 10 years later. One Friday night a bunch of us were going downtown to see a movie. This was in Everett, Washington. At the corner of Hewitt & Colby, next to the pool hall, three cars were parked — a '41 Mercury convertible, a '46 Chevy convertible, and (the most beautiful) a 1939 Ford Coupe.

This car was lowered, teardrop skirts, twin Appleton spotlights, wide Whitewalls, Dual exhaust with 18-inch chrome boom tips. Underneath its hood was a full race Mercury motor, and a Columbia 2 Speed rear end. I said, "That's my car. I will not have lived 'til I have one like that." Being 14 years old that was not likely to happen anytime in the near future.

"Underneath its hood was a full race Mercury motor, and a Columbia 2 Speed rear end. I said, 'That's my car. I will not have lived 'til I have one like that.' Being 14 years old that was not likely to happen anytime in the near future."

— Carl Oliver

The next year my Dad bought a new Ford. I asked if I could buy the '39 for the trade-in price. I was only a year away from my license, and I thought I could start fixing it up like the beauty parked every Friday night by the pool hall. Needless to say my idea was shot down in flames. My father had no intention of having his underage son tempted with a car in the yard.

Besides I only had half the money required to close the deal.

Thirty-five years later it was well known around town I was looking for a clean 1939 Ford Deluxe 4-door sedan just like dear old Dad's. Well a friend called and said he spotted a car like I was looking for in the Hemmings News. The car was in Little Rock, Arkansas. I called the guy and before 5 pm that same day my wife and I were on our way to Little Rock.

Well after we got this beauty home, guess what? It acquired a Full Race Mercury motor, Columbia 2-Speed, Lincoln Zephyr gears, Dual exhaust, with chrome 18-inch boom tips and Wide Whitewall tires. I didn't put skirts or lower it as I wanted it to look just like Dad's.

Well I drove that Ford for 11 years, just like Dad. Now it's gone. It's the best car I ever had.

Carl Oliver lives in Pebble Beach. For 18 years he and his wife, Joan, owned and operated H & H Home Center in Seaside.

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

WE WELCOMED the new baby girl in the Pacific Repertory Theatre family by the wrong name on Sept. 5. Seven-week-old Claire is bringing smiles to dad Stephen Moorer, founder of Pac'Rep, and mom Julie Hughett, associate producer of the theater.

IN LAST week's article updating the issue of the Carpenter Street pathway proposal, we incorrectly referred to the inn on Carpenter Street between First and Second as The Comfort Inn. The correct name is the Carmel Resort Inn.

Truck route improvements delayed until October

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE TRUCK route improvement project that was supposed to start Sept. 2 has been postponed to Oct. 1.

According to Public Works Director Jim Cullem, the Carmel Business Association requested the month's delay to avoid inconvenience during the tail-end of the tourist season.

The project will involve the following streets in Carmel:

- Third Avenue between Junipero and Santa Fe.

This includes the removal and reconstruction of pavement. Also, the intersection of Third and Santa Fe will be changed to ease the sharp, dangerous turn.

- Junipero between Third and Fourth.

Here two inches of asphalt will be added to the surface.

- Thirteenth Avenue between between San Carlos and Rio Road.

This stretch will get an asphalt overlay.

The two-week project will necessitate detours.

Trained volunteer network needed to keep order at Carmel Beach

By PAUL WOLF

AN ORGANIZED, specially trained network of volunteers is needed to look out for wrongdoing at Carmel beach.

That is the current sentiment of Carmel Police Chief Don Fuselier and members of the beach task force, who say friendly, approachable beach cops would help to keep order on the western edge of town.

The terms "volunteer" and "docent" are much preferred, however, these officials would be ordinary citizens, not uniformed officers, who would educate people about the rules of the beach and surrounding areas.

The volunteers would be much like the Point Lobos docents or the volunteer corps known as Bay Net, which is connected with the Monterey Bay Marine Sanctuary.

"If we were to show up at the beach with guns and batons, that would be automatically confrontational," Fuselier said, who made a presentation to the Carmel Beach Master Plan Task Force Monday afternoon.

According to Fuselier, both the police and forestry departments would train the local residents, including how to use police radios.

They would "patrol" the beach, the Del Mar parking lot (at the foot of Ocean) and Scenic Road, talking to people about illegal beach fires, rules for dog walking, parking alternatives and avoiding erosion on the bluffs.

Like docents in public parks, the volunteers might have binoculars set up for whale spotting. Education and a friendly face to the public are the key elements, Fuselier said.

Jean Grace, a former Carmel mayor who chairs the task force, agreed: "It's not an enforcement program we are talking about, but an education program." She envisions two volunteers working at once — perhaps one on the sand, and the other along Scenic, especially during the high season and on weekends.

Fuselier says volunteers could call for police backup if needed.

The task force's recommendations are proposals for the beach master plan, now a work-in-progress. All decisions need ratification from the city council.

Last month, already thinking about the concept of beach volunteers, members supported building them a small gazebo at the south end of the Del Mar lot for a base of operations.

Carmel Forest and Beach Director Gary Kelly has observed that the increasing popularity of Carmel Beach has led to increased rule violations. It's not that people's behavior is worse – there are just so many more people than there were 10 or 20 years ago.

The chief noted that a volunteer corps is obviously not a cure-all. For example, the well-publicized incident last month in which an out-of-control pit bull killed a dachshund may not have been preventable on a beach that doesn't have a leash law.

Fuselier said he is currently studying a model for a volunteer network provided by the city of Ashland, Ore. In that city, volunteers do not patrol greenbelts and open space, but the busy downtown and other public crowded areas.

The task force will discuss the idea at its meeting Sept. 22 — to be held at 4 p.m. in the Chapman Room at Sunset Center.

Healthy Living

By JUDY HIGGERSON, RN
President/Owner Country Home Care

"Before my mother went into the hospital for surgery I went through hell trying to orchestrate the care I thought she'd need when she came home," said Catherine MacDonald. "I hardly knew a thing about home health care. I called my brothers and sister long-distance to get their input . . . and I called my neighbors and the women's church group to see if I could get someone to help my mother bathe and shampoo, to change her wound dressing, to help her use the bathroom. My friends were willing, but let's face it, who wants to help someone to the bathroom?

That's when the Discharge Planner at the hospital told Ms. MacDonald that a home care agency could provide care for her mother at home at no expense because her mother was Medicare eligible and because the doctor was ordering it. "And my mother could choose which agency would come out to her house!" Ms. MacDonald said happily.

"Our neighbors had already had assistance from the agency we selected. Rose assured me she and Fred had been very pleased with how the agency cared for Fred last year, so we told the Discharge Planner that was the agency we wanted. Besides, it's owned by a registered nurse so we figure the care would be especially thorough."

Home care can include physical therapy, occupational therapy, a medical social worker's assistance, and speech therapy, and even a home health aide. "They're invaluable because they do so much of the personal care such as bathing and meal preparation," added Ms. MacDonald. "In fact, my mother became very attached to the aide, who saw my mother most often. The doctor was in charge of all the care throughout and the nurse coordinated it with him. Our hats are off to Home Health Care!"

Group hugs, 'warm fuzzies' help students connect at CMS

By TAMARA GRIPPI

TWENTY JUNIOR high students joined hands and started wrapping themselves into a gigantic group hug — not a sight you see every day. But at Carmel Middle School last week, the books were put away and the students became the teachers.

Instead of math and English, the subjects were a little more personal: respect, peer pressure, divorce.

For the third year, the middle school set aside a day for the students to get to know each other through games and talking. "We design it (the day) so they would interact in meaningful and positive ways," said CMS counselor Kay Anderson.

The students broke down into teams of 20 and learned how to work together. In one game, the students faced each other in lines and tried to keep up many "stress balloons" in the air at the same time.

A red balloon labeled homework flew into the air. As each new "stress" was added, it became that much harder to keep the balloons in the air. But the kids learned that they could rely on their teammates to help.

The student leaders came from Carmel High and the eighth-grade class — some the same age as the participants. Eighty high school students gave up a free day last week in order to train for the Youth to Youth day.

For many of the volunteers, the time invested was worth it. Tenth-grade leader Sarah Wolovsky enjoyed the interaction, which is not available during a regular school day. "You don't sit with people and talk about things."

"I like the fact that the kids can give something back," said Karl Palastrini, CMS principal. "They know what it's like (to be in junior high)."

Warm fuzzies

"Alex is a nice person. Sarah has a lot of spirit." Student leader Jason Baird explained to his group the kind of compliments they could write on stickers for their peers. "These are supposed to be warm fuzzies," Baird said.

The kids began sticking the "warm fuzzy" compliments on each other hesitantly. One boy looked suspiciously at his approaching classmate and asked, "Are you going to put something mean on me?"

"No," she said, showing him the "Matt is cool," sticker.

"OK," he said.

As the students began to trust that the stickers were nothing to be afraid of, they began gleefully adhering them to each other. Some students proudly bore 10 stickers on each arm.

Each game was designed to get the students to talk, listen and hopefully understand each other better — an effort to reduce the put-downs and cliques that are all-too-often a part of the junior high experience.

"We want to set up a school climate where everyone feels safe and comfortable," Anderson said. "Everybody is sensitive to put-downs. Everybody wants to be

Must sea lions be killed

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

TEMPERS RAN high and one commercial fisherman yelled, "Kill, kill!" at a recent meeting to discuss whether an overwhelming pinniped population (seals and sea lions) is responsible for depleting the salmon population in Monterey Bay, and whether their numbers should be drastically reduced.

One environmentalist was practically in tears as she pleaded for alternatives to killing the seals.

Passions on both sides of the "seal or salmon" debate ran very high at the Monterey Conference Center last month, making all sides defensive. One thing is clear: The livelihood of commercial salmon fishermen is being threatened by not enough salmon. According to them, dwindling populations of salmon are the result of over-consumption by seals and sea lions that steal from fishing lines and hang around at river mouths gorging on spawning salmon.

The fishermen have an important ally in the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which just drafted a report to Congress recommending that government officials be allowed, in waters off California, Oregon and Washington, to kill pinnipeds causing significant problems.

According to the report, the government wants the "culling of the herd" to take effect right away, and fishermen are all for it.

But some environmental groups disagree. The idea of killing seals and sea lion en masse is making them very upset.

Are humans to blame?

Rachel Saunders, director of the Center for Marine Conservation, says to pass legislation now allowing the marine mammals to be killed would be premature. Not enough research has yet been done to discover which, if any, methods are existing that can successfully deter pinnipeds without killing them. And although pinniped numbers are high, Saunders calls them only part of the salmon depletion problem.

Saunders wants the public to understand there are alternative methods to what the National Marine Fisheries is proposing. She believes they don't want to spend the money or the time to find them.

Her group feels salmon depletion is caused by many factors including growing human populations and their taste for the rich pink meat of the salmon, the damming of rivers, and the destruction of salmon's natural habitat.

Marine biologists (and sisters) Crissy and Jenny Slaughter say that alternative methods to killing pinnipeds exist, but say they are costly and some are far-fetched.

for salmon to thrive?

Jenny Slaughter suggests placing a world-wide ban on shark fishing, since more sharks will mean fewer seals.

And Crissy Slaughter advocates a higher price for salmon or a boycott of its sale altogether. "It's expected that the fishermen will lose out now," she explains. "But not harvesting salmon for awhile will replenish the stocks. If fishermen don't change their awareness now, everyone's going to lose in the end."

No quick answer

Saunders also notes that El Niño is a big unknown. Warmer ocean waters will reduce pinnipeds' other food sources, and fierce winter storms could kill pinniped babies.

Other suggestions include the use of underwater explosives to scare the seals away from known salmon populations, but John Robinson, public relations director for the Monterey Bay Sanctuary, said that the underwater explosives have had the opposite effect and worked more like a dinner bell for the highly adaptive seals and sea lions.

Sterilization and neutering in theory sound fabulous, agree the Slaughters. But in reality such a project would be extremely costly, time-consuming and be like "opening a Pandora's box of problems. You just don't know how it will effect the habitat," Saunders said.

Even though the agency wants to begin the culling now, the National Marine Fisheries Service says $300,000 has been allocated by them to do research for alternative methods.

They already have a contract with Pacific States Marine Fisheries to develop a new combination of sounds and 'compressions' aimed at protecting salmon from their pinniped predators.

Irma Lagomarsino, NMFS spokesperson, says research is difficult because every situation involving pinnipeds feeding on fish is so different.

"We really don't have great methods, either active or passive, for successfully deterring them," she says. Hopefully for seal protectors, she says, this alternative deterrent method will work.

And NMFS insists they have worked diligently with groups that regulate salmon and salmon habitats to help the fish — some of which are officially 'endangered' — thrive in rivers and oceans. This is one solution that fishermen and environmentalists agree would be by far the best.

Meanwhile, NMFS is going to stick to the recommendation that large pinniped populations be cut back. They say that "lethal removal remains the only effective alternative" for resolving the immediate conflict.

Remembering Hiroshi Katsumata

By WAYNE KATSUMATA

THE MAN in the wheelchair, the devoted wife and their little white dog out for a stroll . . . long a familiar sight to their fellow residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

It seems that everybody knew them by sight, if not by name, for they enjoyed the tranquil beauty of Carmel as few residents do, by venturing out for several hours nearly every day for the past 10 years. No corner of the village was unexplored. Many friends were made along the way — human, canine and feline!

Sadly, the man in the wheelchair died peacefully on Labor Day, surrounded by his loving family at the Community Hospital. He was Hiroshi Katsumata. He was my father. Appropriately, Labor Day was breathtakingly beautiful on the Monterey Peninsula.

His loving wife Tomiko was at his bedside, nurturing him as she had every day, every hour, since he contracted Guillain-Barre syndrome 15 years ago, forcing early retirement. Hiroshi often said, "I could have never made it without her," to everybody. Without a doubt, this was true. No one could witness such care and devotion and not be moved. Fifteen years of around-the-clock care and nurturing. It was the purest expression of love possible.

Hiroshi Katsumata, his loving wife Tomiko and their little white dog, Yuki, were a familiar sight in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Hiroshi, Tomiko and their beloved little white dog, Yuki (which means snow in Japanese) felt truly privileged to live in such a beautiful place as Carmel, and felt blessed to be surrounded by its warm and friendly townspeople who always acknowledged them with a wave and a smile everyday. Hiroshi loved the people of Carmel, and, it seems, he was greatly appreciated in return.

Our neighbors and good friends thought it would be appropriate to let everyone in Carmel know a bit about what a special man he was. The man known to many as a big Forty Niners fan (especially when they won!) lived a long and happy life, but the journey that brought him to Carmel was not without drama and difficulty. Born and raised in Sacramento as the eldest in a family of five children, Hiroshi was a native Californian. He volunteered for military service out of internment camp during World War II and proudly served in the U.S. Army.

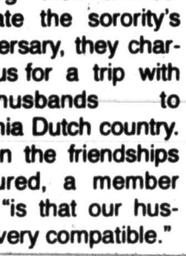
The Golden Years



By Myles Williams

Senior citizens are taking to computers and the Internet in increasing numbers. A 1996 survey by Seniornet, a nonprofit organization based in San Francisco, found that 30 percent of Americans aged 55-75 own a computer. Little more than a year earlier, only 21 percent owned a computer. While seniors use their computers mainly for word processing, 28 percent say they also regularly use an on-line service and frequently access the Internet.

in 1946 a group of high school girls formed a sorority in Mount Kisco, New York. More than 50 years later, founding members continue their activities and longtime friendships. They mix support for charities with socializing among their families. To celebrate the sorority's 50th anniversary, they chartered a bus for a trip with their husbands to Pennsylvania Dutch country. One reason the friendships have endured, a member explained, "is that our husbands are very compatible."

Upon discharge, he continued to serve the government in civil service during the postwar occupation of Japan, where he met and married the former Tomiko Seki, from a distinguished and educated Tokyo family. They lived in Tokyo for 17 years. An avid sportsman, Hiroshi played baseball in the military and was a semiprofessional golfer. He also enjoyed hunting in Japan. In his later years, he preferred the tranquility of fly fishing and gave up his clubs and guns for good.

Avid reader

He was also an avid reader, often completing several books a week from the library. A true "meat and potatoes man," Hiroshi never acquired a taste for sushi or seafood, much to the chagrin of Tomiko. Deciding that my brother Bruce and I, both born as American citizens in Japan, should be "raised in America," the Katsumata family moved to California in 1963.

FIRST PERSON

Upon our arrival in California, both Hiroshi and Tomiko sacrificed everything for our benefit. A new house was constructed in a neighborhood with the best schools. A tireless worker, Hiroshi supported us through U.C. Berkeley, Harvard University and U.C. Santa Barbara, although he himself had not enjoyed the privilege of a university education. He often said he was proud of our accomplishments, but we never let him forget that it was he and Tomiko who made everything possible for us.

It is a comfort to remember that Hiroshi lived to see both Bruce and me happily married. He loved and was loved in return by his daughters-in-law, Pamela Stockwell Katsumata and Kimberly Cerrutti Katsumata. He knew his beloved Tomiko would be loved and supported by this extended family. Hiroshi was also comforted by his sisters and brother who journeyed from afar on short notice to say a final farewell to their eldest brother. Lastly, it is happy to remember that the mention of his dog Yuki would bring a smile to his face until he drew his last conscious breath. He loved Yuki, as he did all animals and pets.

As young children, it thrilled my brother and me to hear our father referred to as "Uncle Hiro" by our cousins. We hope he knew that he was a true hero to us all.

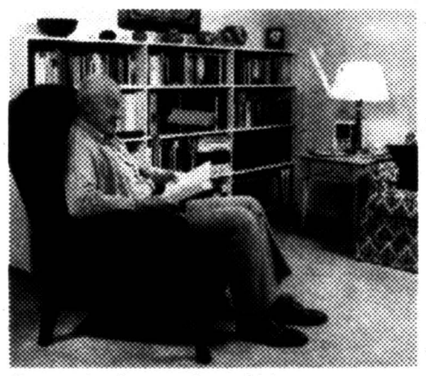
"I've traveled to 92 countries, and there's no other place I'd rather live."

–George Rommel, Ph.D., Canterbury Woods resident since 1994

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

For retired college professor George Rommel, travel has been a life-long passion. He's circumnavigated the globe four times.

But for all the places he's been and things he's seen, nothing measures up to the quality of life he enjoys on the Monterey Peninsula.



George in the comfort of his apartment

George lived for 14 years in a house he designed in Carmel. When he began to look at his retirement living options, he didn't have to look very far.

At Canterbury Woods, he found a community of active individuals like himself who appreciate carefree, independent living in one of the most beautiful places on earth.

George enjoys the privacy of his own apartment, the companionship of friends both old and new, and the peace of mind that comes with the guarantee of comprehensive lifetime medical care.

If you would like to know more about the many benefits of full Life Care retirement living at Canterbury Woods, call us today at (408) 373-3111 or (800) 211-5558.

SPORTS

Prep now for the Fine Arts 5K

By BILL BURLEIGH

THE FINE Arts 5K Run and Walk is the only athletic event where, if properly done, you gain weight. If you participate on Oct. 5, and we hope you do, you will happily consume more calories at the Beach Brunch than you burn off during the 3.1 mile event.

That's okay, though, because you will have a net benefit from the training you did to prepare for the event.

As reader(s) of my fitness column last summer might recall, you burn off about 100 calories per mile, whether you run, walk, or crawl. Therefore, you will use up about 300 calories during our run/walk.

Depending on your appetite, you could consume 600-1,000 calories at our great brunch. Dana Carnazzo and the staff at Grapes of Wrath will serve you their famous yogurt, orange juice, fruit smoothies, scrambled eggs with spinach, cheese and ham, Dana's great home fries, bagel bar with cream cheese and jams, pastries and a mountain of fresh fruit. We'll provide the champagne. (Dana incorporates small paintings into her buffet if you would like to loan us one.)

Consider this your reward for the training you went through. As you know, you don't just get off the couch and do three miles. You have to prepare your body, especially your legs and lungs.

If you have been walking or running a mile or so, at least three times a week, you're ready. If you have been sedentary, you still have time to train to walk the event.

Where to begin

Start today or tomorrow with a relaxed slow half-mile walk on level streets. After a few days, move it up to a mile—still slow. A 22-24 minute mile is okay. By October 1 you should be able to do that distance in half an hour. If you sign up you'll be able to do the 5K in an hour.

The excitement of the event, the happy crowds, and of course a little peer pressure will guarantee your finish.

The value of the event lies in this fact: having completed this 5K you might find that you enjoyed it, and continue to exercise. So we don't care if you gain weight on Sunday, Oct. 5. If you continue to exercise, the other gains will far exceed the momentary gain on this day.

The benefits of exercise are indisputable: weight control, reduced risk of heart disease and cancer, stronger bones, lower blood pressure, pulse rate and cholesterol, and heightened self-esteem.

So why don't you join a thousand neighbors and friends for a jaunt along Scenic and the ocean. We have had great weather the first two years—you know what our fall weather is like. What better way to spend your time? Pause at Carmel Point, and admire the efforts of Carmel Open Space Task Force's participation in protecting this pristine corner of our coast from development. And the 49ers have a bye that Sunday!

After you cross the finish line and pick up your sweat clothes at our booth, you join your friends at the foot of Ocean for the celebratory white table cloth champagne brunch. It's the social event of the season.

You can put on your new T-shirt with the beautiful painting by John Marsh, and perhaps bid for the original of the painting at the auction.

And you can enjoy the satisfaction of knowing that the proceeds from your entry will go to acquisition of open space—from willing sellers—through our beneficiary, the Carmel Open Space Task Force. Our $10,000 profit from last year's 5K went toward the purchase of the property at Carmel Point.

Convinced? Good. You can pick up an entry form at the Treadmill, 111 Crossroads Shopping Center, or send a self-addressed, stamped business size envelope to P.O. Box 4278, Carmel, CA. 93921. (One correction in the entry form; we had approval for the blues band on the course, but the police just canceled it because of two complaints last year.)

See you in a few weeks. Happy feet!

Bill Burleigh is the director of The Fine Arts 5K Run and Walk.

■ Triathlon kicks off tomorrow in P.G.

TRIATHLETES FROM around the world will challenge the scenery of the Monterey Peninsula tomorrow when the third annual Triathlon of Pacific Grove kicks off at Lover's Point.

This year's event includes a new Sprint Distance Triathlon (.2 mile swim, 12.5 mile bike ride, 2 mile run) in addition to the original Olympic Distance race (.93 mile swim, 24.8 mile bike ride, 6.2 mile run).

Organizers specifically designed the Sprint for novice and youth triathletes and for those who shudder at the thought of a long ocean swim.

Contestants compete on a course along the Pacific Grove coastline between Pebble Beach and Monterey.

FOGG AND FAB FIVE LOOK STRONG IN MTAL WATER POLO

By JUSTIN NOSEWORTHY

HAVING LOST only a few key players to graduation last June, Carmel High School's boys varsity water polo team is looking to make a strong impact in the Mission Trail Athletic League this season.

Team captain Trevor Fogg, who led the team in scoring last year with over 100 goals, is expected to use his experience as a senior and perform just as strongly as last year.

Also, moving up from last year's junior varsity team to this year's varsity squad is the "Fab Five" of the junior class: Hank Stoffers, Seth Perkins, Blake Zealer and the dynamic duo of Adam and Erik Struve.

Playing at the varsity level will not be new to the five players as all have experience playing in numerous varsity non-league tournaments in previous years.

Last year they led the JV team to an undefeated season en route to capturing a first place MTAL title.

Another key player to watch is goalie Chase "The Wall" Mahoney, who hopes to continue his defensive mastery in front of the net.

Moving up to the varsity level along with the former JV players is coach Conrad Kohrs, who brings consistent leadership and cohesiveness to the team, along with a great knowledge of the sport.

Kohrs said that he has planned some unique strategic plays that should catch some of the Padres' foes.

The Padres opened the season yesterday against local rival Monterey at at the Monterey High pool.

Despite loss, football team optimistic

By TREVOR FOGG

THE 1997 Carmel High football season kicked off last Saturday with a 42-12 loss to rival Monterey, but first year head coach Dave Stainbrook and the Padres remain optimistic that the team is headed back towards the top of the Mission Trail Athletic League.

The Padres greatest strength, if they can remain healthy, will be depth at the running back position.

In addition to his rushing prowess, senior running back Ben Rianda displayed his pass catching skills against Monterey by gaining 30 yards on four catches. Senior JoJo Grewell, who averaged nearly six yards a carry against the Toreadores, will anchor the backfield with support from juniors Ed Canadas and Mike Hennessey.

According to coach Stainbrook, one of the keys to the Padres' success is avoiding injuries, and already standout senior center Frank Ringer is questionable for tomorrow's game against Harbor High.

At quarterback the Padres feature junior transfer Nason Campbell, who moved to Carmel from Monterey during the summer.

Campbell is a natural passer with a strong arm that was a bright spot during the opening loss to Monterey, completing 10 of 16 passes for 101 yards in the defeat.

The problem may be finding a consistent target for Campbell, although junior Niyago Fields made a strong impression by catching three passes for 51 yards and a touchdown.

On the other side of the ball, the defense showed flashes of brilliance during the loss and will continue to be essential to the Padres' success.

The Padres surrendered 42 points to the Toreadores but two of those touchdowns were the result of offensive turnovers.

When asked about his goals for the season, Stainbrook said, "The goal is always to make the playoffs but I hope that we can be competitive in every game."

OPINION

Editorial

Popular myths die hard

The stylish woman approached and whispered confidentially, "They leave the real crime out, you know. Bad for business."

Her opinion, offered to Pine Cone management last week, was about our Police and Sheriff's Log. This woman was sure that somebody is censoring the log — purging it of anything that might be frightening to free-spending visitors to the area. Just the humorous or the ridiculous items are carried, she felt, as a way of creating the impression that Carmel is a crime-free zone.

Not that the Police Log isn't justifiably famous for the bizarre items that appear there.

Last month, officers were called to the scene of a vehement argument that seemed likely to become a fight. A sheriff's deputy discovered that a man and his son were having a disagreement over who should kill a moth in their motel room.

Last May, a Pebble Beach man summoned the sheriff because he had a discolored patch on his lawn.

Carmel police received a complaint this summer from a woman who was upset that the driver of a passing car had made faces at her.

In April, the Los Angeles Times carried a story about how quaint Carmel is by citing — among other things — this newspaper's Police Log.

Carmel Police Chief Don Fusilier thinks the cute things are fine. But he says they can create a false sense of complacency among Carmel's residents and business owners. After all, if there were no crime, then why would anyone bother to lock their doors?

"Unlocked cars and houses are one of our biggest headaches since they make stealing so easy. So please don't leave the real crime out," the Chief asked Pine Cone management when we began carrying the Carmel Police Log earlier this year.

And we don't. The stylish woman's opinion — that break-ins, muggings and auto theft (not to mention rape and murder) are purposely not reported in local newspapers — is widely believed in these parts. But that doesn't make it true.

This newspaper is dedicated to reporting the news of Carmel and its immediate neighbor communities as thoroughly as we can. The good, the bad and the ugly will all be carried in these pages. We get lots of good tips from our readers, and we spend plenty of time monitoring police and sheriff activities and events at the courthouse so that when something happens we'll know about it as soon as possible. And then we print it.

So when you read about crime in The Pine Cone you'll know right off the bat that it's local crime that you should be concerned about.

At the same time you can be confident that when you don't see news of any serious crime in these pages, it's for the simple reason that nothing happened.

Input needed on downtown 'conservation district'

Dear Editor:

Thank you for featuring the work of the Planning Commission in your August 29 Real Estate section. I would appreciate the opportunity to clarify some misunderstandings that have arisen regarding the idea of a "conservation district" designation for the commercial district.

Our Mayor Ken White expressed a concern for the possible loss of the historic character of downtown Carmel as a number of the aging buildings are due for some kind of renovation and as businesses continue to change, particularly on Ocean Avenue where this occurs more frequently. The City Council and Planning Commission fully support his concern.

The Planning Commission's Vice Chairwoman, Jan Fisher, introduced the idea of examining the possibility of designating downtown a conservation district as a means to protect and preserve the historic characteristics and architectural details of structure there. This could be used as a basis for our commercial design guidelines.

At this stage the subcommittee, consisting of Jan Fisher and myself, is merely studying the idea of a conservation district and do not know whether this can work in Carmel. We will be presenting our findings to the Planning Commission at a public meeting. We also need input and cooperation from the Historic Preservation Committee, the business community and landlords.

Yoko Whitaker,
Chair of the Carmel Planning Commission

Time shares opposed

Dear Editor:

I'd like to elaborate on why I and most residents of the Highlands area are opposed to the conversion of the historic Highlands Inn to time-share units. It's not because we are "confused" or "simply oppose everything" as general manager David Fink stated in a memo to the employees of the Inn.

Half-year report: Sunset project planning painfully slow affair

By PAUL WOLF

SIX MONTHS ago, the city council went on record supporting the project.

A private fund-raising group is organized and poised to find willing donors.

And a special committee has been assembled to make the private-public partnership work.

Apart from these facts, the community has little to show for the Sunset Theater Project. Nevertheless, sources close to the Sunset Center redevelopment effort insist slow progress is par for the course.

"I don't think anyone is frustrated," said Richard Borda, treasurer of the private non-profit fund-raising corporation called Sunset Center for the Arts. "It's painfully slow, but that doesn't surprise me."

The public-private steering committee will hold its third meeting Sept. 23 to discuss the proposed $13 million-plus theater reconstruction. (Which could run double that figure, see analysis on page B-1.)

The committee's mission is to secure agreements between city officials and representatives of the non-profit corporation. It may surprise some in town to know that certain questions have yet to be answered:

- Whose project is it — the city's or the private group's?
- Who has final say on design details?

Those who contribute money may not want to feel shut out of the design process, according to sources.

- How much money must be contributed from the private and public sides of the equations?
- What specifically will be asked of competing architects for the project?

City officials report that it is a long way off before the requests for proposals are delivered to hopeful architects.

"If this is worth doing at all, it's worth doing slowly," said Carmel Cultural Director Brian Donoghue, who noted that the project could be several years away from opening night.

liked."

Janet Meyer, an organizer with the event from Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA) explained that it's often difficult for adults to get through to students on difficult topics.

"I can talk to them about respect all day, but I'm an old lady," Meyer said.

Role models

At a time when peer pressure often rules the playground, it's important for students to see positive role models their own age.

If the students can see that popular, self-assured high school students are willing to make strong decisions about not taking drugs or abstaining from sex, they'll be influenced in a positive way, Anderson said.

Many students paid attention when they heard their peers talking.

"Having the (high school) students made it more fun because they just finished what we're doing. It's easier to open up to them," said Eighth grade student Amber Brown.

"We talked about how stress can get too overwhelming," said sixth grade student Daryl Lambert. Lambert learned if things get too bad, he could "read or something."

Some of the messages were simple. "I learned that you can have fun without getting in trouble," said Colby Grewell, a sixth grade CMS student.

In only the second week of classes, the school district was ready to set an upbeat tone for the entire year. "We think having a positive school climate is important," said Superintendent Joe Jaconette. "We're willing to spend a whole day working on that."

Helping others comes naturally.

Pebble Beach Company naturalist Roxayne Spruance uses nature to help students learn basic reading and science skills.

For Roxayne Spruance, volunteering means spending nights with sea otters at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. And working afternoons helping local schools.

Roxayne gets a valuable reward every time a child's eyes light up with the joy of discovery. And for the students, schoolwork gets a lot more interesting.

Roxayne is one of many Pebble Beach Company employees who actively volunteer in Monterey County.

Each finds satisfaction protecting the environment or improving the life of a child, adult, or family in need.

Cachagua resident shoots self; leaves note but no explanation

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CACHAGUA RESIDENT John D. "Shasta" McDowell, 33, was found dead on Labor Day morning outside at his home.

The cause of death, as determined by the Monterey County Coroner, was a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.

McDowell was last seen Saturday evening in the area of his home in Cachagua. According to the investigating coroner, a note was found, but the contents revealed no reasons why McDowell would commit suicide.

The resident of Cachagua for the past four years worked as a chimney sweep and was in the process of becoming a Cachagua firefighter. McDowell served in the US Army and moved to Carmel Valley shortly after his service.

A blood toxicology report by the coroner is pending.

Family members notified of the death include parents Mary and Richard McDowell, sister Bonnie Dighton and brother Michael McDowell.

Press no danger to privacy

HERE we are in Congress. It is Sept. 25, 1789, and they're considering some amendments to the Constitution which, itself, was approved a few years earlier.

The First Amendment is generating spirited debate here, and all the movers and shakers — the real heavy hitters — are here for this one. Among them, of course, are:

George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Ben Franklin, John Hancock, Patrick Henry, etc.

The main sticking point on the First Amendment revolves around the Freedom of the Press provision.

HERE'S the exact wording of the Amendment:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; ..." Etc.

GEORGE wonders if the Amendment may be giving the press too much power without accountability."For example," he said, "don't people have a right to privacy? What would prevent some of the tackier newspapers and magazines from running SKETCHES by sleazy artists who get their material by window-peeking or peering through keyholes?

FIGURE ESCALATES: Sunset Theater project could cost up to $25 million

■ BECAUSE OF 'SOFT COSTS,' FAMILIAR $13.6 MILLION FIGURE TELLS ONLY PART OF STORY

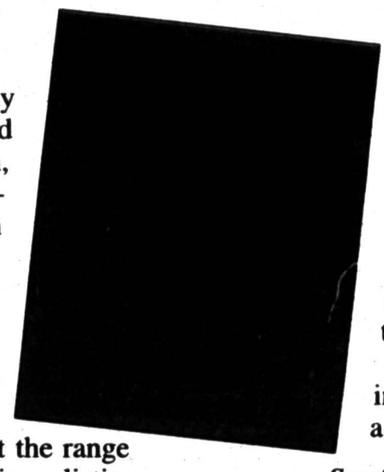
By PAUL WOLF



This public notice was taped to the doors of Sunset Theater's balcony doors this week.

TWO KEY city officials say the Sunset Theater project could cost as much as $25 million, nearly twice as much as the oft-cited $13.6 million figure which was disclosed in an environmental impact report last year.

In independent interviews with The Pine Cone this week, City Administrator Jere Kersnar and Public Works Director Jim Cullem agreed that the range of "$20 million to $25 million" is realistic.

The $13.6 million sum — used frequently in the context of fund raising — only tells part of the story, they said.

So-called "soft costs," including design work and a long-term contract for

A BRIGHT red public notice taped on the doors to Sunset Theater's balcony declared, "UNSAFE BUILDING — DO NOT ENTER."

Early Monday workmen removed the two front rows of seats and split flooring to reveal joists and subflooring of the venerable theater balcony. All this was in preparation to placing new blocking between the joists, installing new oak flooring and securing the seats with six-inch lag bolts.

A memorandum to Mayor White and City Council members last Friday by City Building Official Tim Meroney rang the alarm bell on the deteriorated seating in Sunset theater's balcony.

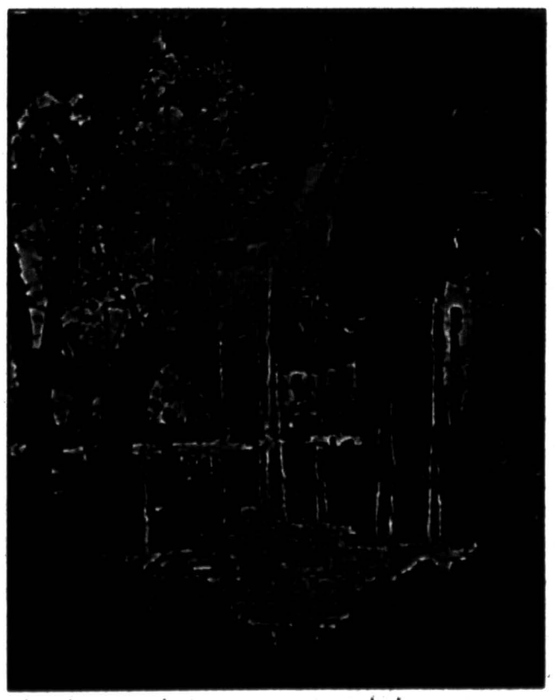
Bid on art, sample wines tomorrow during Hospice benefit in Carmel gallery

TWO ATMOSPHERIC watercolors by Carmel artist, the late Jack Laycox, as well as two florals, a painting on an artist's palette and a bronze sculpture will be displayed for silent auction to benefit Hospice Foundation for the Central Coast. The auction will take place from 5 to 7 p.m. tomorrow at Carmel's Gallery Americana.



The late Jack Laycox created this painting when he was a resident of Carmel.

The gallery, located on the corner of Sixth and Lincoln, will host a wine tasting and art show, "A Taste of September," which will feature the works of more than 60 artists, including Ovanes Berberian, Mario Jason and Edward Szmyd. Wines from six Monterey vineyards will be poured.

Throughout Saturday evening, visitors to the gallery may record bids on any of the six pieces of original art displayed in one of the showroom's galleries.

"The idea is to combine the fun of a wine tasting and art show with a chance to contribute to a very serious cause," said David Woodhead, gallery owner. "We've always considered ourselves a very accessible gallery. This show allows us to connect not only with the people who come and enjoy the art, but also with people who benefit from the auction."

Gallery Americana was founded in 1969 by Ralph and Rosemary Miner, who established it as a gallery of traditional art. It was sold five years ago to Trailside Galleries, and again this year to David and Dede Woodhead. Director of the gallery is Josh Feurman.

"Me and My Shadow" would be a fitting theme song for these two inseparable pals, Virgil and Tulpen McCutchan — although as far as we know, dogs don't have theme songs.

While Tulpen, a black lab, presumably has not read Albert Camus' "The Stranger" — either in French or English — she lives by the book's existential premise: Once you have saved another's life, you are forever responsible for the one you rescued.

Before Tulpen and Virgil came into her life, their mom-to-be, Kiersten, was a student in Atlanta. One day, she happened upon an emaciated, homeless black lab eating from a dumpster. She rescued the lab and named her Tulpen.

Later, fattened up and in good health, Tulpen was out for a run with her new mom. As they jogged by a dumpster, Tulpen pricked up her ears and came to a screeching halt. Unable to make Tulpen continue on, Kiersten peered into the dumpster and found a virtually furless 5-week-old puppy. Lifting the tiny part-chow, part-corgi pup from the refuse, she took him home, named him Virgil and cured his skin disease that had rendered the tiny pup almost bald.

Later still, all hale and hearty, the little family of three drove across six states to California in a Jeep Wrangler, Virgil and Tulpen's ears flying fetchingly in the breeze. Now relocated in Carmel, they run up and down the beach together at every opportunity, casting one shadow in the white sand.

Historical novelist Naida Smith West found remnants of the past in her own backyard

■ Returning for Carmel High reunion, West will also read at the Thunderbird

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

NOT EVERY novelist lives with ghosts of her protagonists — and on the very property that they inhabited 150 years ago.

But Naida Smith West does just that — on her small gold country ranch along the Cosumnes River in Rancho Murieta — telling the tale of these native peoples and settlers in the years from 1844 to 1853 in her prize-winning novel, "River of Red Gold," now in its second printing.

Returning here this weekend for a reunion of Carmel High's Class of 1957, West will juggle that event with a reading from her novel. The literary happening is set 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday at the Thunderbird Bookshop in the Barnyard.

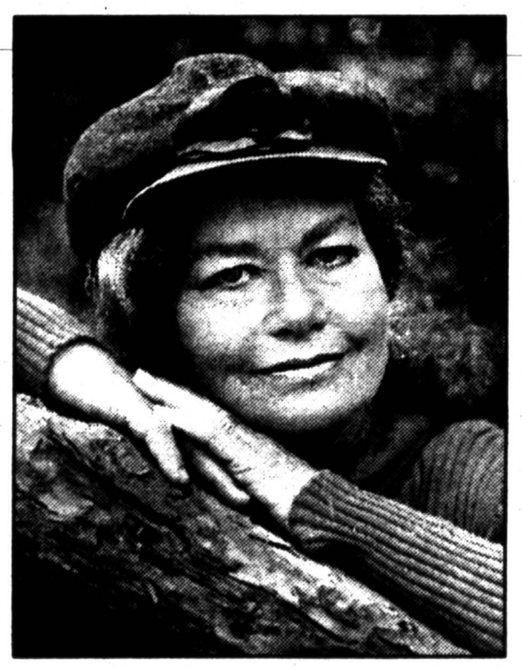
Although she went on from Carmel to earn a Ph.D. in sociology and taught at the University of California at Davis, poetry and writing have been her life-long avocations

Creating her historical novel was a labor of love which blossomed into a full-time writing career. Even before West penned "River of Red Gold," she authored a number of historical and sociological articles which were made into an anthology.

Historical novels are West's preferred genre

"The story I dug up from my garden and obscure historical archives astounded me," West said, referring to historical events that have taken place on her property. "It was my mother lode."

This is no figurative rhetoric. West literally "dug up" historical evidence of mother lode history on her ranch. In her author's notes at the beginning of the novel, she says, "This book started when I was digging in my garden." She and her husband not only dug down to flooring from an old ranch house that used to occupy the site in the 1800s, but were told stories by the former owner that gold coins had been unearthed by turkeys scratching in the farmyard.



Naida Smith West

"Once, a man from the East knocked on our door and asked if we had found Perry McCoon's grave," West said. "The bones of a story lay littered about us, and I decided to dig it up."

Covering the early years of California on the brink of the Gold Rush, West intertwined the true story of native peoples and settlers in the then-pristine Sacramento plain where John Sutter built his fort and aided his friends in acquiring ranchos.

Even a 14-year-old Donner Party survivor figures into this historical novel — one Elitha Donner — who is rescued from the Sierra and then waits in vain for her parents' return. Later, she marries Perry McCoon and moves to an adobe on the Cosumnes River where she meets a Miwok Indian named Mary whom she regards as her soul mate.

An Indian massacre, the destruction of cattle ranches as gold frenzy engulfs California, the first California water war, Joaquin Murieta's career and death — all are seen through the eyes of Elitha with Mary as her alter ego in a parallel world, each helping the other to survive.

West says, "The fates of the characters are not only historical, but representative of California and the West."

She goes on frequent speaking tours for "River of Red Gold," which was awarded the 1996-97 Best Fiction, Gold Award for Best Book Overall from the Sacramento Publisher's Association, and expects the prequel to "River" to become available later this year. She is beginning work on a sequel set from 1870 to 1890.

West, who lived in Carmel with her mother on Guadalupe Street while attending Carmel High, says she has been highly influenced throughout her life by her school teachers, especially Carmel High English teachers, Mariquita Bray and Frances Davis, whom she refers to as having been "outstanding."

"While I'm looking forward to seeing old classmates, I can't help feeling how wonderful it would be to see our old teachers again, as well," she said.

project management will add many millions of dollars.

"It does seem as though the cost keeps escalating, which may scare some people," said Jim Cullem.

Most of the expense of the redevelopment project — which would replace the old elementary school auditorium with a world-class performance hall and support facilities — would be paid by a private fund-raising effort.

The nonprofit corporation Sunset Center for the Arts and the city of Carmel are currently at work hammering out a cost-sharing agreement.

Breaking it down

The soft costs, according to Kersnar and Cullem, include:

■ PROJECT DESIGN WORK

An estimated $300,000 to $400,000 already has been projected for "preliminary designs," and the private corporation has agreed publicly to pick up those costs.

In February, the Carmel City Council approved the basic project conceived by an Oregon design firm. But it is unclear how much total design work will be needed. Cullem said design costs can account for as much as 10 percent of the total price of a project.

■ PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Because the massive project — the largest, most complex in the city's history — would be under construction for about two years, key city personnel will not be able to devote their full attention to it 40 hours per week.

Cullem said he has checked with other cities and has learned that project management could cost as much as 8 percent of any effort. He noted that the five-year-old Monterey Sports Center used private management during its design and construction phases.

The management firm would work for the city but would remain independent of the project's architect and the contractor. The firm would enter the picture late in the design process, evaluate the feasibility of the designs, oversee construction, test the new structure and inspect the finished project.

"We as the city would not hire a bunch of public employees to oversee the project; the firm might be managing other projects at the same time, but they could be the equivalent of three full-time employees," Cullem said.

Cullem said it is important that the firm be in place well before the end of the design phase because "not everything that an architect designs can be built."

Monterey Public Works Director Bill Reichmuth said that outside project management "allows you to come in on time and under budget." He noted that the $15 million Monterey Sports Center, completed in 1992, included a $350,000 bill for an independent manager. That bill would have been much larger were it not for the fact that Monterey has a large enough staff to handle much of the management responsibilities.

■ PARKING IMPROVEMENTS

Representatives of Sunset Center for the Arts have maintained consistently that parking improvements — whether a parking structure or underground garage — should be looked at separately from the theater project.

The EIR from last year estimates that parking improvements would cost about $4.3 million. The $13.6 million figure doesn't include parking.

According to Kersnar, if the city determines that parking upgrades are essential to the new, busier theater, it may not be possible to separate the cost of parking from the rest of the project.

In addition, improvements to neighboring roads may account for more hidden costs of the project.

■ UNANTICIPATED RENOVATIONS

According to Kersnar, additional projects within the Sunset complex may be "triggered" by the theater renovation. These could include the replacement of the plumbing, electrical and heating systems.

■ 11TH HOUR PROJECT CHANGES

The city administrator noted that the Carmel decision makers may be faced with design choices that could add to the total cost, whether or not they are, strictly speaking, necessary. "There is definitely a desire to choose a facility that is going to work, and that may cost more," Kersnar explained.

Speaking for the fund-raising corporation, treasurer Joe Battilega said the mission of his organization doesn't change regardless of the exact cost figure.

That mission is to raise private money and to ensure some kind of contribution from the city, which he said is needed to inspire the support of private citizens.

"We need to know what the number is," he said. "We certainly believe we can raise the $15 million or so that has been talked about, but I can't say more than that."

Board member Richard Borda said the corporation is now in the process of "figuring out how deep is the well of private support" for the project. "We don't know the answer to that, but we have a sense there is support out there."

The escalating figure associated with the soft costs also raises the question of how much the city will agree to kick in for the Sunset Center Project. Informally, city officials and corporation official have suggested that the city could contribute $5 million — a sum equal to the overdue repair needs of the existing Sunset Complex.

At present, city officials have not determined where the money will come from. In all likelihood, the city would have to raise not only the capital ($5 million or whatever is determined to be the city's share) but the interest to pay off the necessary loan.

Kersnar and the city council are exploring the idea of a paid parking program for the commercial district, but that revenue-boosting plan is months away from undergoing public and council review. A similar paid-parking program was introduced but abandoned in 1993.

LANDMARK 'JAZZ WEEK MONTEREY' ON HORIZON

SEPTEMBER is synonymous with jazz. With the advent of this year's landmark anniversary, the Monterey Jazz Festival will take on an even higher profile.

A free jazz concert featuring legendary bebop saxophonist James Moody, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday on the lawn of City Hall in Monterey, will highlight "JazzWeek Monterey," a week-long local celebration of the 40th anniversary of the festival. Co-sponsored by the Monterey Jazz Festival and the City of Monterey, the celebration kicks off today with the opening of an art and memorabilia show at the Monterey Museum of Art and at the Monterey Conference Center. Posters, programs, photographs, instruments and assorted memorabilia will all be on display.

By Stephen L. Vagnini

On Tuesday starting at 5 p.m., a free concert by the Monterey Jazz Festival High School All-Star Band will take place at the Farmer's Market on Del Monte Avenue and Alvarado Street. On Thursday, more than 400 students will be bused to the Monterey County Fairgrounds for a free concert by clinicians Bill Berry, Tee Carson, Paul Contos, Bruce Foreman, Vince Lateano and Scott Steed.

In addition to the free concerts and exhibits, a statue created by Takashi Yoshida of Nanao, Japan (Monterey's sister city) will be unveiled and presented at the Monterey Conference Center. A duplicate of a statue created by Monterey artist Robert Scott Holt (donated to the city of Nanao) will be unveiled at the same time. The activities are intended to bring the Jazz Festival to the people of Monterey. For those unable to make it to the Jazz Festival itself, a short trip to any of the above activities is well worth the time and effort.

Stephen L. Vagnini is a self-described music activist. For more than 15 years Vagnini has promoted concerts, managed bands and covered the local music beat.

The Main Event: September 19-21

The 40th edition of the Monterey Jazz Festival, now firmly under the direction of young general manager/booker Tim Jackson, continues its tradition of presenting non-stop performances by renowned jazz artists coupled with featured jazz conversations, panel discussions and exhibitions of historical photos.

Although season tickets to the Jimmy Lyons Stage concerts have long been sold-out, determined individuals always seem to find a way into the main arena. Performing at this year's festival is a stellar lineup, a mix of legendary past performers and a long list of festival newcomers; a respect for the past juxtaposed by a peek into the future of jazz, a style of booking that has become a signature of head honcho Jackson.

As always, five main stage concerts will take place throughout the third weekend of September. Beginning on Friday, Sept. 19, the Festival opens with the first-time appearance of celebrated trumpet player Arturo Sandoval. A protege of Dizzy Gillespie, Sandoval was a founding member of the Cuban group Irakere. He was granted political asylum in the United States in 1990 and he received his first Grammy in 1994 for Best Latin Jazz Album. Also on Friday evening the Festival will celebrate another 40th anniversary with the presentation of "Dave Grusin presents West Side Story," a new arrangement and tribute to the classic Bernstein musical first premiered in 1958. Grusin, the recipient of 10 Grammy Awards for his jazz albums and film scores, is the co-founder of GRP Records, perhaps the most successful contemporary jazz label in the world.

Saturday afternoon's traditional blues concert on the Jimmy Lyons Stage will spotlight Chicago blues artists Otis Rush, Koko Taylor and Buddy Guy. The recipient of Billboard Magazine's Century Award, the music industry publication's highest honor for a career of distinguished creative achievement, Guy has built his reputation on electrifying live performances. Since signing a record deal with Silvertone in 1990, Guy has received three Grammy Awards for Damn Right I've Got the Blues, Feels Like Rain, and Slippin' In. Guy, Otis Rush and Koko Taylor are recognized giants in the world of blues.

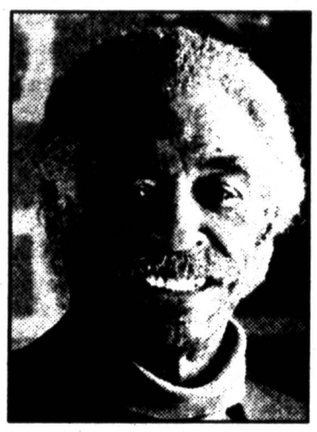
The evening of Sept. 20, clarinetist/-composer Don Byron will perform "Bug Music," featuring works by Duke Ellington, Billy Strayhorn, John Kirby and Raymond Scott; followed by performances by the Jim Hall Quartet and Charlie Haden's Quartet West with String Orchestra. Considered by many to be the greatest guitarist in jazz, Hall performed at the first Monterey Jazz Festival in 1958 with Jimmy Guiffre and Bob Brookmeyer. Says jazz historian Leonard Feather, "Hall's influence, both as a traditional and innovating musician, has probably been more felt since 1960 than that of any guitarist since Charles Christian and Django Reinhardt." Bassist Haden, a vital part of a jazz revolution begun by his mentor Ornette Coleman, is a master of simplicity. Haden (along with Mingus) helped change the role of the bass player in jazz. His evolving style of playing enabled the bass to become more of a direct participant in the music-making. His work with the Liberation Music Orchestra has marked a milestone in jazz.

Since taking over for founder Jimmy Lyons in 1992, general manager Tim Jackson has been consistent in booking fresh jazz voices in particular on Sunday afternoon. Following Sunday afternoon's performance by the Monterey Jazz Festival High School All-Stars (along with a reunion featuring Patrice Rushen, Benny Green and Dave Ellis), multi-Grammy award-winner, sax player David Sanborn will make his first Monterey Jazz Festival performance. Known more for his success as a pop instrumentalist, Sanborn has nevertheless established his name in the world of jazz as one of the first exponents of fusion. His 1986 platinum album, Double Vision, released with pianist Bob James, solidified his reputation as a jazz innovator.

Finally, on Sunday evening, the Monterey Jazz Festival's 40th anniversary will conclude with perhaps one of the strongest closing concerts in recent memory. Highly acclaimed pianist/vocalist Diana Krall will make her debut Monterey performance followed by this year's artist-in-residence Gerald Wilson and legendary saxophonist Sonny Rollins. A veteran of the Count Basie Band and the Dizzy Gillespie Group, Wilson also contributed arrangements and contributions to the Duke Ellington Orchestra. This year Monterey veteran Wilson will compose this year's commissioned piece, participate in a jazz conversation and he will preside over the Gerald Wilson Orchestra on Sunday night.



Gerald Wilson

Having performed at the first Jazz Festival in 1958, Sonny Rollins made a triumphant return to Monterey in 1994 and this year he closes out the 40th edition. Perhaps the jazz world's greatest living improviser, Rollins has recorded with Charlie Parker, Lester Young, Dizzy Gillespie, Thelonious Monk, Miles Davis and just about every jazz legend there ever was. One of the first jazz musicians to explore world music, Rollins is a jazz giant in every sense of the word. In his own words he conveys his modest sense of being, "I get a little leeway for being who I am ... but I still have to be good when people pay their money. I'm still yearning to get to my peak, and I haven't reached that point yet."

'I get a little leeway for being who I am ... but I still have to be good when people pay their money. I'm still yearning to get to my peak, and I haven't reached that point yet.'

Men in Black: Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith star as top–secret agents who monitor extraterrestrials who have come to Earth looking for better lives. Barry Sonnenfeld directed the science–fiction comedy, with Vincent D'Onofrio as an evil, destructive alien and Linda Fiorentino as the New York City medical examiner. (PG–13) Galaxy 6 Cinemas.

Money Talks: Chris Tucker stars as a con artist who is accused of killing a policeman and finds unlikely support from a tabloid–television newsman (Charlie Sheen). Brent Ratner directed the comedy. (R) At Galaxy 6 Cinemas.

My Best Friend's Wedding: (PG–13) Lighthouse 4 Cinemas.

She's So Lovely: Sean Penn and Robin Wright Penn star as a troubled couple who are separated when he is imprisoned, then meet again years later, when she is securely married to a solid middle–class man (John Travolta). Nick Cassavetes directed the romantic fable, from a screenplay by his father, John Cassavetes, who died in 1989. It also stars Harry Dean Stanton, Debi Mazar and Gena Rowlands. BALCONY...

The notice declared, "This situation renders the front two rows unusable due to their potential dangerous condition. Until repaired properly, I have prohibited use of the entire balcony by all persons."

What had alerted anew Sunset Center Director Brian Donoghue to the deteriorated condition of the balcony flooring — and which subsequently was passed along to Meroney — was a complaint from a recent Bach festival patron who notified Donoghue's office that the front balcony seats "aren't even bolted properly."

Donoghue told The Pine Cone this week that the seats have been regularly rebolted as they loosened with use. When checked again after the Bach Festival, he had concluded, "they just couldn't be secured one more time."

According to Meroney's report, the screws that hold the seats to the floor had become stripped and the wood flooring was observed as being split and deteriorated "beyond immediate repair."

Monday afternoon Donoghue said, "We are working on the first two rows, the seats close to the railing. They are the first to be occupied at any performance, and receive more use than seats in rows further back."

He continued, "The front seats are just old. They've been taking a lot of weight for a long time. The seats have been pulling away for years and we have regularly tightened the screws.

"The motivation here is a safety issue. Any work we do from here on in is related to safety, pending remodeling of the theater."

Donoghue was referring to the Sunset Center Theater Project which will see the old theater torn down and rebuilt sometime around the millennium.

The second and third phase of the balcony project is to repair the remaining rows of seating over the next two years. Meroney reported "by repairing three rows each year to complete the work, we should budget $15,000 per year for '98-'99 and '99-2000." There are a total of eight rows of seats in the balcony.

Marilyn Hempel will discuss progress

Marilyn Hempel, executive director of the League of Women Voters Population Coalition, will speak at the first fall meeting and luncheon of the New Forum. The title of her speech is "Progress: Human and Wild."

The meeting will be held at noon Monday at Rancho Cañada Golf Club. Cost for members and non-members are $16. For more information: 375-4518.

SPEAKING OF FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

"AND later on when cameras are invented, it will be even worse!

"Am I going to be seeing sketches or photographs in the supermarket tabloids of Martha in her petticoats? Or of me powdering my wig?"

"YOU wear a wig?" gasped Francis Lightfoot Lee, a farmer.

"What in the name of Ned is a supermarket?" asked Bob Paine, a lawyer.

"And what's a tabloid?" asked Benjamin Rush, a physician.

"NEVER MIND!" thundered Ben Franklin, a printer and publisher. "If a newspaper showed titillating sketches like that, nobody would buy the infernal paper!

"The American people won't stand for smutty stuff. It would never sell!"

"NOT only that," chimed in John Jay, another lawyer, "publishers are all honorable men and would never stoop to anything like that.

"I'm sure those fine gentlemen will always police their own profession."

"I WANT to insure you," added John Hancock, "that law-abiding citizens will never have to worry about having their privacy invaded by the press."

Thus it came to pass that no restrictions whatever were imposed on the press's right to get the pictures and stories they wish, in any way they see fit, simply because none was foreseen as necessary.

AND to this day, despite all the loutish, in-your-face atrocities perpetrated by the paparazzi in Europe, there has never been an incident in which a reporter or photographer has failed to respect the privacy of anyone in the U.S.!

(Join us for another fascinating Aesop fable, coming in this column again in the near future!)

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . Earl Charles Spencer, her brother, in his eulogy at Princess Diana's funeral Saturday:

"I don't think she ever understood why her genuinely good intentions were sneered at by the media.

"My only explanation is that genuine goodness is threatening to those at the opposite end of the moral spectrum."

THESE FOOLISH THINGS . . . Bemused by Pebble Beach Co.'s sudden surge of "good neighbor" advertising, Elise Walker — a wry cynic, she — thinks they have left something important out of their slogan.

The company's catchy, if not original, slogan for this campaign is, "One world . . . And we're all in it together."

ELISE says that, to be honest, the company really should add one more line:

"Unless you're unable to come up with the $7.25 gate fee!"

(Cold, Elise, cold.)

INCIDENTALLY, if you were wondering about the derivation of "paparazzi," Pacific Grove's Richard Foster forwards a clipping stating that the word was invented by Federico Fellini for his 1961 movie, "La Dolce Vita."

It is said to be a combination of two Italian words — "papatacci" which means gnats, and "razzi" which means the popping of flashbulbs!

AND if that isn't really the correct derivation, it OUGHT to be!

WHILE we're talking paisanos, we should tell you that all-time Green Bay Packer quarterback great, Bart Starr, and his wife were in a party of four that dined sumptuously Friday of last week at Carmel Valley's fine Sole Mio restaurant.

(No, Starr isn't the paisano, but he's the excuse for the item.)

ANYWAY, old Bart, who loves superlative pasta, was in ecstasy over the fettuccine con polpette until the restaurant's merry, irrepressible owner, Domenico Vastarella, whispered a joke to him — and Bart lost it!

Not his pasta, mind you, just his composure as he disintegrated into gales of laughter!

WHAT the Starrs were doing in this area was playing golf, but Bart said they'll return soon for more pasta — if not more of Domenico's jokes!

(Trust me on this, the pasta is far superior.)

ROMNEY Dunbar, a KSBW news anchor for the past five years, has given his two-weeks notice that he will be moving on.

He hasn't said where yet, but the versatile Dunbar is a man of many talents.

IN fact, I'm quite sure that he is the only news anchor that has worked for all three local English language stations — KSBW, KION (which formerly had different call letters), and KCBA — and was never fired by any of them!

He'll be missed.

ANOTHER former KSBW newsman, Greg Gilchrist, who left awhile back to move up to a Sacramento station, has now given his notice there in order to become — cue the trumpets — a WALNUT FARMER in Red Bluff!

Funny what constant exposure to those hot lights can do to you!

NO, honest, Greg, everyone here is pulling for you. No one really believes you've gone nuts, but if you find yourself with an extra bushel or two, send 'em on over to the newsroom! You know how they crave anything free!

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY . . . Until the Monterey Herald's new "working mom" publisher (a Minnesota ad salesman) learns to call what they throw on your doorstep each morning "the paper," instead of "the product," the Herald is not a newspaper at all, it is simply a shopper.

Or maybe a can of Midwestern corned beef hash. But definitely not a newspaper.

P.S. - The really scary thing about the Knight-Ridder bunch is they're actually making Lilith look good!

BUT it's the weekend. Think kind thoughts.

THEATER REVIEW

'Heat' the missing ingredient in this 'Romeo and Juliet'

By MARK SHILSTONE-LAURENT

RECENTLY, when pressed to come up with my "favorite movie of all time," I expected to ponder awhile but found myself voicing the answer in just seconds — Franco Zefferelli's 1968 version of "Romeo and Juliet." And if there is a single word to describe that Academy Award-winning film version of Shakespeare's tragic tale, it is "heat."

Zefferelli created a Verona that sweltered. From the opening fight scene to the sensual masquerade ball, to the musty tomb where the lovers perish, perspiration flowed. The audience was made to feel the heat from the scorching sun and, even more importantly, from the passionate themes and emotions on which the play is built.

Even the recent cinematic version of this "...tale of woe," although not as universally praised as Zefferelli's (and rightfully so), also manages to capture the intensity and raw passion of this, one of the grandest tragedies captured in dramatic literature.

Unfortunately, this intensity and heat is strangely missing from the current Pacific Repertory Theatre rendering of the play which recently opened at The Golden Bough Theatre in Carmel.

Director Stephen Moorer has mounted a production that is pretty to look at and stays true to the text in both setting and execution — no gun-toting gang members a la the recent film, or gymnastic, song-styling punks a la Broadway's musical version, "West Side Story." But overall, it turns out to be a pretty tepid version of a searingly hot play.

Worthy of praise

Certainly there are elements worthy of praise. Moorer knows his Shakespeare and is a seasoned director with lots to offer. He creates fluid, well-balanced stage pictures and is never afraid to let the beautiful words do the work. He clearly reveres and loves the play for the work of poetry that it ultimately is.

And there are a number of solid performances. Mindy Stock, John Farmanesh-Bocca, Paul Jennings, Peter Eberhardt, Brian Linden and John Francis Brady in particular shine. (More on the characters of Romeo and Juliet later).

And the technical elements also deserve praise: Steve Judge's set design, Ed Hills' lights, Rhonda Griffith's costumes, Bob Borwick's fight choreography and Jeannie Wooster's original musical score.

But in the end, this is a production that seems to lack dynamics, a critical element of any work of art — the highs, the lows, the varying emotional shadings. Put simply, it is the quiet scene that gives the boisterous scene its volume, the dark moment that offers something to lighten up from. This production fails to give full value to the intensity, depth and range of emotions that are at the heart of "Romeo and Juliet."

This certainly isn't because the actors aren't giving it their all. You can see their honest and determined work. This is especially true of Randal Leigh Wung and Caryne Shea as the star-crossed lovers. Both actors are technically sound and honestly endearing, but in the end are ultimately miscast as teenaged lovers.

Both are obvious pros. Shea's strong work is familiar to Pacific Rep audiences, especially her winning performance as Constanze, Mozart's wife in Pac Rep's production of "Amadeus." And Wung is currently flabbergasting audiences in Pac Rep's highly successful production of "The Compleat Works of Wllm Shkspr (Abridged)." But

Damien Mathison Quartet

Sat. Sept. 13

A Bay Area native, harmonica and sax player Damien Mathison plays a mix of jazz and world music. Having studied music in San Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, he is strongly influenced by the music of Brazil. He has performed at the Russian River Jazz Festival, Kimball's East, and a variety of other venues around San Francisco. His first recording, Intercambio, features Damien supported by Ricardo Peixoto, Harvey Weinaple, and Josh Workman among others. The evening will include an eclectic mix of jazz and ballads.

Diana Krall

Thurs. Sept. 18

One of the strongest young talents around, pianist and singer Diana Krall grew up in Nanaimo, British Columbia surrounded by music. Her influences include Ray Brown, Fats Waller, Dave McKenna and her teacher, the late Jimmy Rowles. As a singer/pianist, she was led to the music of Nina Simone, Shirley Horn, and Roberta Flack. She found a sound she really liked in the music of the Nat King Cole trio. Her latest and highly-acclaimed Impulse CD, All For You, includes Krall's hard swinging and bluesy interpretations of standards of the King Cole Trio.

Ali Ryerson & Joe Beck

Fri. Sept. 26

Flutist Ali Ryerson will perform an evening of intimate music with Joe Beck on guitar. With a happy and mellow outlook, Ryerson swings effortlessly with a seductive vibrato. Her round tone has an expressive breathiness sometimes reminiscent of Ben Webster's tenor saxophone. She has played with Stephanie Grappelli, Kenny Barron and Art Farmer, among others. Ryerson's current Concord release is entitled Brazil.

David Friesen

Sat. Sept. 27

Jazz Store favorite and bass virtuoso David Friesen will perform a solo concert after his earlier duet appearances with Denny Zeitlin, Bud Shank, and Uwe Kropinski. Friesen is an innovator on the bass, which explains why he is so sought after by other performers. He has performed and recorded with a long list of musicians, including Mal Waldron, Clark Terry, Paul Horn and Airto Moreira. This promises to be a very special, intimate evening of music.

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

Sportswise of Carmel

Since 1980, Sportswise of Carmel has been the place in Carmel for the latest in easy-to-care-for, fashionable sportswear for travel, tennis, golf, or just on-the-go.

Located on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Sportswise consistently sets the pace for other sports-related apparel stores in the western United States.

Sportswise was designated one of the top 10 sports apparel stores in the United States by Sportstyle Magazine.

Aside from carrying such top designer labels as Jamie Sadock, Bobbie Burns and Hanasport, the owner of Sportswise, Wes Stoddard, also designs and manufactures an extensive line of activewear in Microfiber, Tencel, cotton, rayon and silk in a wonderful array of colorful solids and prints, with an emphasis on fashion, fit and easy care.

Gregory's Fine Furniture and Mattress Shop

Newly opened across from Brinton's is Gregory's Fine Furniture and Mattress Shop, located at 26200 Carmel Rancho Blvd., Carmel.

In this airy, two-story setting, discover top-of-the-line furniture by Broyhill, Lexington and Wesley Allen. There are comfortable recliners by La-Z-Boy, and Highland House displays its eight-way, hand-tied sofas.

The newest and best quality mattresses from Sealey, Serta, Simmons and Spring Air are also gathered here.

Gregory's Fine Furniture and Mattress Shop offers complimentary design consultations. The showroom is the source for a wealth of one-of-a-kind accessories to accent a room. And, as a grand opening special, many items are offered at exceptionally low prices.

The shop is open 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. daily and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. To learn more, call 620-0155.

ColorTouch

Automobiles with painted plastic bumpers (and there are many these days), are vulnerable to minor scuffing. ColorTouch is a mobile car color touch-up service that corrects this damage, without requiring an inconvenient trip to the body shop.

Experience no down time for your automobile as ColorTouch reports to your car, and repairs damage in typically less than two hours.

ColorTouch serves the entire Monterey Peninsula and specializes in seamless refinishing of that painted bumper. And yes, they can match even exotic colors.

To experience the ease of expert repainting by ColorTouch, call 644-7115.

Papyrus

Pure silk ribbon, sumptuous wrapping papers, stationery of near-decadent quality... Beautiful things are the stock-in-trade of Papyrus, located in the middle level of Carmel Plaza.

The shop was recently acquired by William and Lena Moore, who are proud parents of a 13-month-old son, Steven. They also express pride in the exquisite inventory maintained at Papyrus, which is home to such prestigious names as Marcel Schurman (cards and wrapping paper), and Crane (personal stationery) and a large selection of museum-image boxed notes.

Unlike the displays at many shops, the cards at Papyrus are fully visible, making selection that much simpler. (Or difficult — there is such great variety). They can fill orders for wedding and party invitations. Papyrus is home to journals, frames, sealing wax and a family of classic Winnie the Pooh gifts: from night lights to music boxes.

Papyrus is open daily. Call 626-6441.

Film Commission celebrates 10th anniversary

The Monterey County Film Commission celebrates a decade of filming activity with a gala affair, Saturday, Oct. 4, at the Embassy Suites Hotel's Laguna Grande Ballroom in Seaside.

The party, complete with catered dinner, a swing band, and Hollywood-style searchlights outside, will commemorate 10 years of economic development work by the non-profit film commission. The event is black tie optional. Civic leaders, film industry personnel, "Friends of the Film Commission" and anyone who wishes to help celebrate the 10-year anniversary may attend the event, which begins with no-host cocktails at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets are $75 per person and are available by calling the Monterey County Film Commission at 646-0910. A discount is offered to members of "Friends of the Film Commission."

'Idiot's Delight' auditions planned at MPC

Auditions for the MPC Theatre Co. production of "Idiot's Delight" will take place 1 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 4-5, on the Monterey Peninsula College Main Stage.

Scheduled to run Dec. 4 to 21, "Idiot's Delight" has 12 speaking roles for three women and nine men, ages 18 to 70, and 12 featured roles for six women and six men, ages 18 to 30, who can sing and dance. People trying out for the featured roles should come prepared to sing and dance.

Audition materials are available by calling 646-4085.

"Idiot's Delight" tells the story of a troupe of entertainers traveling in the Alps who become involved in pre-World War II intrigue. Jerry DeBono is the director.

Romeo and Juliet...

although they give it their professional all, in the end they just aren't right for these roles.

In addition, although any audience member is glad to have a director who isn't afraid to cut the text, Moorer has curiously cut out one of what would seem to be the play's most important scenes.

Feeling comfortable that we all know the basics of the story, a critical point in the making of the play's final tragedy occurs when Friar Lawrence sends a messenger to tell the banished Romeo of Juliet's feigned death. However, Romeo never gets the message and because of this, the tragedy spins hopelessly and fatally out of control. This element of the plot is cut in this production, thus weakening the impact and the irony of the tragedy.

But again, the show has its strengths and one would be remiss in not mentioning one of the shows strongest elements, Jeannie Wooster's fine underscoring. Wooster, as The Chorus, sets wonderfully appropriate moods with her fine voice and skillful guitar work. Her work helps to at least begin to add color and shading to the play.

And Bob Borwick's fight choreography is inventive and arresting. He does an especially fine job with the critical Tybalt/Mercutio/Romeo brawl. And Farmanesh-Bocca, Linden and Wung are all accomplished stage combatants who execute the choreography with flair. They create some of the play's most exciting moments.

This is a play that can always be recommended. It holds up as one of the most moving tales in all of theatrical literature. And the current Pacific Rep production, even if a bit flat and lifeless, has enough strengths to make for an enjoyable evening of theater. Go listen to the ageless poetry and fight that urge to yell out to Romeo, "Wait! She's not really dead!"

Food&

Turnabout is fare play – fusion works both ways

NATIONAL FOOD trend reporter Florence Fabricant sees a new trend upcoming on restaurant menus. What's sweet is not and what's not, is! To clarify, cheesecake is appearing on many menus as a savory appetizer or side dish rather than dessert... a variation of New Orlean's celebrity Chef, Emeril LeGasse's Smoked Salmon Cheesecake showed up on a Toronto menu and several big city eateries are featuring different presentations of spiced shrimp cheesecake as appetizers. Primary among the ingredients is goat cheese in place of the usual cream cheese and similars. Sweet spring rolls are another example: Rhubarb Spring Rolls with Rhubarb Jus and Cinnamon top a menu in New York, and variously fruit-flavored rolls (shades of cannole) are popping up everywhere. Well why not, today, food is supposed to be fun. "Fusion" works both ways!

Bakers: Take note!

Why can't someone make a good New York-type rye bread? The closest thing in flavor are the caraway bagels at Noah's Bagels. Unfortunately there seem to be more seeds on the outside (which remain in the bag) than in the dough. I'm going to dig up a recipe I used to use when we lived in Mexico and had the same problem and share it with all of you.

Tasting Monterey

This information can be found in exhibit form at A Taste of Monterey on Cannery Row. A fun tasting/party idea would be to invite friends over to try and detect the differences in growing areas for these Monterey County wines. There are also several tasting rooms scattered throughout the county where one can visit and discover the wide variety of flavors of Monterey County wines.

By KEN RAUH

THE POTENTIAL of Monterey County as a wine producing area was not realized until the early 1960s. It was during this time that a study, conducted by the University of California at Davis, ranked Monterey County among the top areas in the world for growing fine wine grapes. The publishing of this research report by the viticultural authorities coincided with an increase in demand for table wines. As a result, the area's production of fine wine grapes grew substantially.

Currently, the county's wine industry boasts nearly 38,000 planted acres of premium wine grapes. This makes Monterey County one of the largest premium grape growing regions on the continent of North America. One of the main reasons for this constant growth is the climate. The county is blessed with an extremely long growing season.

Grapes here, on average, enjoy an extra 45 to 60 days of developing on the vine every year when compared to other northern viticultural areas.

Temperatures in the county vary widely between growing areas. The varying climates allow for roughly 40 different grape varieties to thrive.

The grape growing areas of Monterey County are comprised of different regions known as AVAs (American Viticultural Areas). A Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF)-approved grape growing region, it is distinguished by soil, climate, elevation and topography. Wines which have the AVA appellation stated on the label are required to have 85 percent of their contents from the named appellation. The following AVAs can be found on Monterey County wine labels:

Monterey: Though often confused as an appellation that encompasses the entire county, the Monterey AVA appellation is in fact the largest in the county.

This area enjoys differing micro-climates which allow a wide variety of wine grape varieties to flourish. The differing micro-climates are due in part to the varying proximities of the growing areas to the cooling effects of the Monterey Bay. Characterized by a long growing season, nearly half of Monterey is planted with Chardonnay. Other varieties, such as Pinot Noir, Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon and Riesling also thrive. The long growing season supplies the white wines with strong tropical fruit characteristics and red wines with bright colors in a smooth style.

Hames Valley: One of the newest registered wine growing regions of Monterey County, Hames Valley was approved in 1994 by the BATF. The grape growing area of this valley is sheltered from the strong winds of the Salinas Valley. However, Hames Valley receives substantial evening cooling from the Monterey Bay. On average, it is much warmer here than the majority of Monterey County's northern wine growing AVA appellations. The warmer weather patterns are similar to that of the County's southern neighbor, Paso Robles.

Shaly loam soil coupled with the unique climatic characteristics found here impart intense flavors, outstanding balance and brilliant colors to the dominant varieties, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot.

Arroyo Seco: First planted in 1962, the geography of this area extends from a narrow steep canyon which opens to the western edge of the Salinas Valley floor. The red Bordeaux grape varieties prosper in the mouth of the canyon, which is warmed by reflective heat, generated from the soil and nearby cliffs. The valley floor is relatively cooler, providing ideal climatic conditions for white Burgundy grape varieties. Integral to this area's soil composition are the "Greenfield Potatoes" (3-4 inch cobblestones) which store and release heat and promote excellent drainage.

Both factors are vital in the production of outstanding Chardonnay that is well-known for its strong tropical-fruit characteristics.

Carmel Valley: Father Junipero Serra's padres first planted vineyards here prior to the 1800s. Commercial grape growing began in 1968 with 40 acres of Cabernet Sauvignon planted in the Cachagua (an Indian word meaning Hidden Springs) region of the Carmel Valley. Soon after, wines from this area achieved a strong national and international reputation. In 1983, 19,200 mountainous acres of Carmel Valley were granted AVA appellation designation.

The planted vineyard acreage of this area has since grown substantially. Today, more than 70 percent of the 252 planted acres are allocated to the red Bordeaux varietals, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. The well-drained, gravelly terraces of the area coupled with warm days and cool mountain nights yield rich and flavorful wines.

Santa Lucia Highlands: Approved in 1991 by the BATF, the vineyards are planted on the southeast facing terraces of the Santa Lucia mountain range.

This location provides for extended exposure to the sun. As a result, the vines take full advantage of the morning sunshine before the afternoon maritime breezes start to cool the vineyards. This climatic combination results in an especially long growing season which allows the grapes to fully develop and attain maximum varietal potential. Nearly half of the 2,300 planted acres is Chardonnay. The other half is comprised of equal amounts of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Pinot Blanc, Pinot Noir and White Riesling which are all well known for their intensity of true varietal character.

Chalone: The first vines were planted here in 1919. These are the oldest producing vines in the county. The area is home to just under 200 acres of mostly Chardonnay, Pinot Blanc and Pinot Noir. This AVA appellation is located at an elevation of 1,800 feet, in the Gavilan Mountain range, near the Pinnacles National Monument. This location provides for dramatic daily temperature swings that average highs in the 90s to lows in the 50s.

Chalone's soil consists of decomposed granite with moderate amounts of clay and limestone. Unique soil structure and a mountainous climate enable this area's grapes to produce wines of very high quality in a classic old world style.

San Lucas: For more than 150 years, the land in this part of the county was utilized for cattle grazing until vineyards were established in 1970. There are 8,000 acres of Merlot and Sauvignon Blanc. Forty vineyards are now comprised of almost equal amounts of Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon. The soil is a combination of diatomaceous shale and varying sizes of sand stone. The wines from this area possess brilliant colors, abundant varietal flavors and distinct fruit aromas.

VILLAGE VERSE

RITE OF PASSAGE

Summer has spent herself playing
Hostess to the world
Time has come for solitary walks
Along abandoned shores,
My only companion, a solitary gull
Bobbing in troughs between the swells
The only sounds are the distant thunder,
The constant sea, and the music of
The wind as it ruffles the sand

Beyond, the low sun shines in a
Mackerel sky, long shadows
Stretch to the horizon,
Amber sea oats on mile high dunes
Whisper and sigh in the evening light

Life abounds in this tranquil place
Its timelessness astounds me,
It is the season I love the most
The season of the winter beach.

"Excruciating low in fat"

Isn't that a hilarious phrase for a nutritionist to use in describing our delicate little California Pink Shrimp? They also seem to be "excruciating" low in calories and are good sources of omega-3 fatty acids. Anyway, they're quite delicious and best of all, quite inexpensive for those of us addicted to these diminutive members of the crustacean family. They're in season, so toss them into a favorite salad or make a shrimp salad sandwich for lunch today. Here's an easy Fusion recipe for their use.

California Pink Shrimp Stir Fry

Serves 4

1 cup each, red, yellow, green sweet peppers, julienne
1 medium yellow onion, peeled and sliced
3 Jalapeno chiles
1 tsp. each, butter & olive oil
2 limes, juiced
1 cup sliced mangoes
1 pound cooked California pink shrimp
1/3 cup mango juice
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

1. Cut pepper strips and onion into one-inch pieces.
2. Working with gloves, carefully remove stems and seeds from the Jalapenos and mince.
3. Heat butter and oil together in a wok or non-stick skillet. Sauté onion and peppers until heated through and still crisp. Add mango slices, shrimp, mango and lime juices and chiles.
4. Toss the whole gently until heated through (do not overcook as shrimp will toughen).
5. Serve with brown rice or couscous.

THOUGHTS WHILE COOKING

Have you hugged your redwood today?

Before coming to this gorgeous part of the world, I had a tendency to scoff at the conservationists who chained themselves to objects to halt what they deemed environmentally destructive projects. After spending a glorious weekend among the arboreal "gentle giants" of the Santa Cruz Mountains, I've changed my attitude.

We were invited by a friend to share a Bed and Breakfast weekend above Scotts Valley, and the experience was transcendental. Coming off Highway 17 is always welcome under any circumstances and winding up the side of the mountain was a relaxing relief.

The welcoming sign at the entrance to the property says "Valley View," and if I weren't such a chatterbox on paper, I might write that the sign says it all — but it does not! The two-bedroom house itself perches like an aerie and the floor-to-ceiling windows are reflected in mirrored walls facing the view. We understood that the builder had been a protegé of Frank Lloyd Wright, and the master architect's influence is strong. Standing in the glass, stone and wood living room is a bit like being a forest deity, totally alone and at peace, on a mountain top minus the usual gale winds. Both bedrooms are placed so that the beds look out at the surrounding peaks and magnificent trees. Two redwoods became my special friends that weekend; I called them Mutt and Jeff — poor Mutt had only reached a height of 80 feet or so!

Valley View has all kinds of hi-tech comforts, remote control TV and VCR, a FAX, and a kitchen in the round which I loved. I was named the cook for the weekend (now we know why we were invited), and I whirled around its lacquered turquoise expanse like a parrot fish in an exotic aquarium. But the view is distracting — how many times I wandered, steaming pot or wine glass in hand, to the window walls to check both on my towering leafy friends, but also the three merrymakers in the hot tub.

Later in the evening our host sat down at the piano (did I tell you there was a piano too?) and played boogie woogie and ragtime while Bert and I sat in the hot tub — fair exchange for a fair meal. If you want to get away for a romantic, peaceful stay not too far from home, or engage in quiet business dealings away from crowded "power lunch" surroundings, I highly recommend the redwood-guarded jewel that is "Valley View," but I warn you, after the experience you're liable to chain your family and yourself to a centuries old sequoia semper-virens and certainly to sneer ever after at each laden logging truck you see.

Carmel Bay Tides — September 12 to 18, 1997

• Use this chart to help plan your activities along our incomparable coastline. For example, a sunset campfire at the beach is best planned when there will not be a high tide during the evening hours. Very low tides (especially those below the zero level) provide the best opportunity to explore local tide pools. Fishing is said to be best on days when the tidal variation is greatest. And don't forget that coastal flooding and erosion can be severe when a very high tide coincides with a major storm.

• Tides are primarily caused by the pull of the moon and the sun on earth's oceans. Accordingly, the greatest tides (spring tides) occur when the sun, moon and Earth are aligned (full moon or new moon). When the sun, moon and earth form a right angle tides are smaller (neap tides).

• Every 25 hours there are two high tides and two low tides. "Mean sea level" is the average of all tides and is the same everywhere on the Earth. "Mean high tide" (approximately 4.7 feet on the tide chart) is the average of all high tides and, in California, is the legal boundary between private coastal lands and publicly-owned tidelands.

Escrow Education Corner

QUESTION: My great-aunt has promised to sell me her home for a reduced price when she moves to an assisted-care facility late this year or early next year. She is a very trustworthy person, and I'm sure she wouldn't do anything to cheat me. Should I get Title Insurance when I buy her house. Do you think she would be offended if I suggest title insurance?

I'm not sure what it is for, but I think Title Insurance is to protect a buyer from a disreputable person or salesman.

ANSWER: The purpose of Title Insurance is to protect your ownership from the claim of others. A Title Insurance Company searches the title to the property, looking for liens, easements, and the claims of others. Once a Policy has been issued, it protects the owner from a list of items, from "long lost" relatives claiming an ownership to making sure that any loans that have been taken out against the property are released. They make sure that any tax liens and judgements have been removed. They also spell out any tax liens and judgements have been removed. They also spell out any easements or restrictions that have been recorded.

Would your great-aunt be offended? Not if she understood the importance of Title Insrance.

Golub House: Six foot height 'gift' still too little

■ City's 'missing ordinance' makes 18-foot height limit indefensible — on one parcel at least

By PAUL WOLF

THIS IS the tale of "a missing ordinance," an unintended gift and the frustrated hopes of a couple who want to add-on to their retirement house in Carmel.

And the courtroom may turn out to be the place where the final chapter is written, predicted the attorney for Orville and Evelyn Golub.

The Golubs are Bel Air residents who have been locked in a battle with the city for years. They want to build an addition onto their long-time vacation house on N. San Antonio Avenue so they can live in it full-time. The city turned down their addition two years ago because of its proposed height.

But now the city has inadvertently given Orville and Evelyn Golub a special privilege — the ability to build their proposed addition six feet higher that the 18-foot limit that was supposed to be law on San Antonio Avenue and in the rest of the so-called beach overlay zone.

Only one project can benefit

A "technical oversight" (City Administrator Jere Kersnar's term) dating back to the early 1980's precludes the city from defending its 18-foot limit, explained City Attorney Don Freeman.

But because the Golubs' application is the only one pending, only they can benefit from the loophole, Kersnar said.

Ironically, on Tuesday in the city council chambers the elderly couple's representatives said that extra boost is not enough to satisfy their aspirations — a two-story, 28-foot addition with special features accommodating Mrs. Golub's physical limitations.

Attorney Antonio Rossman and architect Dennis Hodgin said 28 feet is the minimum height needed if the house is to be habitable with any degree of comfort, including an elevator leading from the garage to the expanded second level. Hodgin said a two-story addition that will suit the Golubs' needs is not possible with a 24-foot limit.

The Golubs' existing house is already the tallest on the street, reaching 31 feet above grade according to city reports. It was built before — and may have been the cause of — the 18 foot limit that the city enacted in the early 1980's.

Tuesday, the council agreed to return the Golubs' proposal to the Carmel Planning Commission, which two years ago nixed the project.

Almost all other building projects in the same neighborhood have been held strictly to the 18-foot limit — even though the loophole has apparently existed for more than fifteen years.

In recent weeks, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar, the city staff discovered that, back in the early 1980s, the council overlooked a procedural requirement for an "enabling ordinance" on the special height limit.

The city administrator said the city will quickly close the door on the possibility of other 24-foot height requests by approving the proper enabling legislation as soon as possible.

While it may be a case of "better late than never," only the Golubs have the chance to benefit from the error.

And their victory may be short-lived. The 18-foot height limit is part of the city's Coastal Land Use Plan, which means the Coastal Commission will probably enforce it even if the city can't.

Escrow endangered when house next door burned to ground

By PAUL MILLER

THE HOME on Dolores St. was all set to close escrow when a September 2 fire reduced the house next door to a smoking pile of rubble.

"At that point the buyers — a retired couple from Florida — wanted out of the deal," Carmel realtor John Saar, who represents the sellers, told The Pine Cone this week. "They said, we don't want to deal with all the problems."

The fire destroyed the house at 24759 Dolores Street, just outside the Carmel city limits and across the street from the RLS lower school. Wilma Jean Hooper had lived there 36 years when she died suddenly on August 20. The CDF arson investigator is checking into the cause of the fire that destroyed her home less than 2 weeks later.

"Another agent in our office, Rob Bunce, represented the buyers of the house next door to the fire," Saar said, "and he did a fantastic job nailing down exactly what it was that made the buyers want to back out."

Thanks to the efforts of firefighters, the house in escrow didn't catch fire, but it did suffer from the intense heat. The roof was scorched, copper gutters were melted, the stucco was "baked" and the fence between the two houses was burned. Repairs to all those things are already underway, Saar said. The home inspector was called in to re-do his report and confirm the extent of the damage.

"What disturbed the buyers more was the idea that the smelly wreck of the burned house might just sit there for a long time," Saar said, adding that no law requires that the ruins of a burned house be cleaned up right away.

He said the lawyer for the deceased woman's estate, was very cooperative and is helping get the lot cleared of the fire-damaged debris.

"After they got used to the idea, the buyers changed their minds again and decided to go through with the purchase." Saar said.

Once again, escrow is scheduled to close soon "Expect the unexpected," Saar said is the lesson he learned.

The sign says, "Sale Pending," a statement which was no longer true just after the neighboring house was destroyed. The ruins of the house are just visible directly behind the sign.

Ban on new wood roofs lifted

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A month after Carmel got word that wood roofs had failed critical tests for fire-resistance and the roofs were prohibited in the village, building official Tim Meroney announced that the information leading to the ban was false and that wood roofs would again be allowed on residential buildings in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

In July, Robert Burns, executive director of the committee for fire safe dwellings, told the Monterey Bay Chapter of the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO) that wood products failed the third year of weather testing, Meroney said.

And the building officials group told its members that wood products could no longer meet the "Class A" requirement of fire resistant materials.

At the most recent ICBO meeting, Meroney learned that the wood products with a fire-resistant underlayment have actually withstood 10 years of weather testing — qualifying them for the "Class A" rating.

Carmel's ban on residential wood shingle roofs — like the one on this Comstock cottage — lasted only one month

In June, the Carmel Planning Commission decided to allow only synthetic roofs in the commercial district. That decision remains in effect. Man-made roofing materials have a longer life span than the treated wood roofs, Meroney said.

California projected to have fifty million people by 2025

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

The Golden State will continue to grow at an astounding rate, the Los Angeles Times reported last week. By 2025 the state will contain an amazing additional 18 million people, growing to 50 million from the current 32 million. About half the growth is expected to come from international immigration.

The report was based on projections from the United State Census bureau, which forecast that four states will increase by 50 percent or more in the next 27 years: California, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico.

The New York Times reported similar numbers under a headline that said, "In the Golden State, All That Glitters Is The Future."

POLICE LOG

year-old daughter had sex with a 24-year-old man that she met on the Internet. An eight month cyber-relationship resulted in him taking a bus from Wisconsin for a rendezvous in Carmel.

Carmel Valley: A resident of Carmel Valley discovered the body of a white male adult who died as a result of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. The name of the victim is withheld pending notification of next of kin. The coroner's division is investigating.

Carmel Valley: Woman called to report that there was a car in a parking lot on Carmel Valley Rd. which contained many abandoned animals. The owner of the car was located who explained that she was homeless and kept the animals in her car. (one dog, four cats, one pot-bellied pig, one rabbit and one mouse). They were found in good condition with both food and water. Woman said she checks on her animals constantly and would move her car out of the sun.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle stopped at Highway 1 & Ocean — driving erratically possibly under influence. Turned out to be a foreign tourist unfamiliar with the vehicle.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of gun shots fired in the area of Monte Verde & 4th. Witness reported the sound came from a car that backfired, not a gun.

Carmel area: Conducting an area check of Carmel High School, it was discovered five buildings had recently been vandalized. Buildings had been spray-painted with obscenities. The paint was still wet. Buildings located in school personnel parking area.

Carmel area: Woman reported receiving a call from an unidentified male. The male identified himself as a bank representative and asked woman for her credit card information. She refused to give any information and hung-up. Bank reported that it was not their normal procedure to make such calls. Woman had no suspects.

Carmel area: Several neighbors reported yelling coming from an area on Riverside Way. Man was found intoxicated at residence. Everything was fine at residence and man eventually calmed down and remained there.

Carmel Valley: Report notified that an elderly woman was wandering around. Upon arriving, several juveniles informed officials of her residence. Her husband informed police that she has Alzheimer's disease and did not know that she was missing. She was located and returned to her house.

Carmel Valley: Man jumped off a deck and broke his leg. Transported to CHOMP by ambulance.

First on my list of concerns is the intensification of use that time-shares inevitably bring. People who buy a week's stay per year for the next 75 years for $20,000 will naturally want to get the maximum benefit from their investment and consequently occupancy will increase. Staying for a week rather than the now more-common night or two will mean more cooking in the rooms, more garbage and more water consumption. The result being far more stress on the already inadequate septic system that all nearby residents can attest still reeks on busy weekends in spite of a recent upgrade.

Another result would be far more traffic in and out of the Inn. The proponents have claimed traffic will not increase but their comparisons are based on other destination-type time shares that have all kinds of activities like golf and tennis right on their premises and very little of interest outside. The Highlands Inn is just the.reverse with little to offer as far as family activities on their grounds. Guests staying there for a week would be likely to make several trips per day out of the Inn, exacerbating our already-critical traffic problems.

My most serious objection is the greatly increased fire danger that will accompany the increase in occupancy. The Inn puts nearby Highlands residents at risk as it is with delivery trucks and guest cars often blocking the very narrow roads above the Inn. During the brush fire this spring the management showed where their priorities are by instructing guests to ignore the fire department's requests to evacuate. I was told this by two employees of the Inn. The fire was luckily brought under control fairly quickly but such irresponsibility could have led to a disaster.

Finally, please consider the extraordinary profit Hyatt Corp. stands to gain by selling 143 units times 51 weeks a year at $20,000 each. It's not likely that any adverse effect to the Highlands community concerns them in the least.

On August 27 the planning commission approved the Hyatt Corp's application for the conversion. The project will now be submitted to the Board of Supervisors and then to the California Coastal Commission.

Tribute to golfing buddy

Dear Editor:

Last Friday a dear friend and associate of mine, Roy Emery, passed on. Roy was an avid golfer and I have composed a short verse to commemorate his love of the game. Actually it's dedicated to all of the golfers I have known, loved and lost over the years.

Though you may look to see him on the course,
and cannot find him, do not try to force
In memory's dark hiding place, a recollection of his kindly face.
For search you may, and yet when looking brings an end, of thoughts that flood with hopes that might have been.
Go out and play one final round and when you cross that well-worn ground
Just listen to the wind that strokes the trees and sure enough you'll hear him in the breeze
Or nearing eighteen pause and look around
'cause out there somewhere surely must be found, The course goes on that we must some day play. A tournament that starts on judgment day.
So do not grieve, his loss is ours it's true
But think of this, it has a brighter hue.
The game he now can play, with friends
we think have passed away.
Where handicaps mean nothing in the end
they only score the eagles there my friend.
And every stroke for him a perfect lie.
So when you read this please don't cry.
They all are watching as we play our rounds and when we birdie we'll know they're around.

Don Soule, Carmel

Letter writer might be 'banned from walking on beach'

Dear Editor:

Throughout the years, I have been amused by the ranting and ravings of Jeff Middlebrook in his "Letters to the Editor." There seems to be no end to the range of topics that Jeff feels very strongly about and he has never been shy about sharing those errant thoughts with the rest of us. I don't think I have ever agreed with Jeff's point of view; he's always appeared to be just a bit off in his thinking but he has never inspired me to answer back — until now.

You've gone too far Jeff! You're getting cranky and snippy as you get older — your attacks are vicious and your bite tenacious — in short Jeff, you are turning into a pit bull.

I've walked the beach of Carmel for over 40 years; I've encountered dog fights (I feel badly about the death Mr. Brunet's dog) but they do not compare to the number of human fights I have witnessed. I have seen people bitten by dogs but I've seen a lot more people injured by someone throwing balls, bottles, punches; I've seen dogs steal food but I don't think a dog was ever accused of stealing a wallet. I have stepped in dog poop but I'd rather step on that then a broken beer bottle some "frolicking homo sapiens" has wantonly tossed aside. In fact Jeff, if you really love clean, white sand take your family down to Carmel Beach after any 3-day weekend — humans may have built "universities, libraries, rockets " etc; but, some of them still haven't learned how to use the trash receptacles that line the beach — for every bag of doggy trash you fill, you'll fill three bags of human garbage that was left strewn on our lovely sand — none of it bio-degradable .

Watch it Jeff, or you may find that you and your kind is banned from walking on the beach unless you are accompanied by a dog!

Susan Rogers, Carmel

'Finally getting a balanced view'

Dear Editor

The owners of The Pine Cone are to be congratulated for their recent coverage of our traffic problems. The publication of the first installment of the entire decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals in the Aug. 29 issue was like a breath of fresh air. We are finally getting a balanced view of the facts surrounding the proposed Hatton Canyon Parkway.

The fact that a public entity, the Park District, is a party in this lawsuit is an outrage. Here we have the Park District, a tax supported group, using our tax dollars to sue Caltrans, another tax supported group. I hope publishing the results of this court case will cause the citizens to register their disapproval of the waste of their tax dollars in this futile attempt to prevent Caltrans from doing their job.

To the publishers of The Pine Cone — keep up the good work.
